Steel Industry To Begin Talks

Keenan Sworn As Ambassador

One of Stop-Russia Group Will Go to Moscow; Succeeds Kirk

Washington, April 2 (AP)—Diplomat George F. Kennan, one of the authors of America's stop-Russia policy, was sworn in today as ambassador to Moscow. He promised to work for an easing of tensions between the Communist and western worlds and "the improvement of the international atmosphere."

"Those are objectives which seem to me urgently desirable and I see no reason why they should not be within the realm of possibility, if the desire is reciprocated," he said in a prepared statement.

Trusted Adviser

Kennan is one of the administration's most trusted advisers on relations with the Soviet Union.

To Open Its Parley With CIO; Price Is Big Issue at Present

New York, April 2 (AP)—The steel industry announced today it would start negotiating with the CIO United Steel Workers Union tomorrow with the price situation "the big issue" standing between a settlement and a strike.

The talks originally were scheduled for Monday, but were stalled for three days.

Soon after the industry announcement, John A. Stephens, U. S. Steel Corp. vice president, told a news conference the industry would try hard to avert a strike of 650,000 steelworkers tentatively set for April 8.

Price Is Big Issue

"The price situation is the big issue," Stephens said.

Stephens referred to the industry's contention that it needs a $12-a-ton boost in steel prices to meet wage increases and other benefits recommended for the workers by the Wage Stabilization Board.

The industry has been trying in Washington to obtain consent of wage stabilization officials to such an increase. The government has contended a $2 hike is all that can be granted.

Stephens said "equity" was a "fundamental" of the nation's stabilization program and that this meant the industry needed the price increase to balance increased labor costs.

"If there is no equity," he said, "the companies would be foolhardy and derelict in their duty if they tried to absorb costs when they know this would spell ruin for the companies."

Government Rests In Costello Case

Gambler Might Not Go on Stand, Counsel Indicates

New York, April 2 (AP)—The government today rested its case against gambler Frank Costello, charged with contempt of the U. S. Senate for refusing to answer questions before the Senate Crime Committee last year.

The prosecution case took three days. The defense was expected to be brief. Defense attorneys said they did not expect to call Costello as a witness.

Not Necessarily So

Earlier, Federal Judge Sylvester Ryan commented that the fact that a senator deemed an act contemptuous did not necessarily make it so.

Ryan offered his comment during a courtroom discussion of technical questions during the absence of the jury.

The discussion centered around how much of the committee hearing transcript should be submitted to the jury.

The defense contended some of the transcript was prejudicial to the defendant, including comments from committee members.

His Second Trial

Costello is being tried on the charge for the second time, the jury disagreed in the first trial.

Condition Is Unchanged

Washington, April 2 (AP)—The condition of James W. Wadsworth, former senator and representative from New York, continued unchanged today. "He appears to be about the same; if anything, he might be a little weaker," a family friend told a reporter. Wadsworth, 74, is suffering from a long-standing abdominal ailment. He entered Emergency Hospital several weeks ago.

Pupils Are Questioned

Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy questioned a group of pupils at School No. 4 after a false alarm was sounded from Box 2221 at 12:41 p. m., today at Delaware and Lindsley avenues. The chief indicated it was known definitely that the alarm had been sounded by a youngster but he was unable to determine immediately who had done it.

Council Takes Stand Against Bus Curtailment in Two City Sections

Kingston Has Full Weather Bureau Equipment at Hall

Operates in Conjunction With Station at Albany; Interest Began in '32

Kingston now has a complete branch weather bureau station of the U. S. Weather Bureau, City Engineer Arthur F. Hallinan announced today.

Its equipment in the engineer's quarters, city hall, includes a new rain gauge, modern instruments for measuring atmospheric pressures, temperatures, humidity, and one for measuring the speed and indicating the direction of the wind.

The local bureau operates in conjunction with the Albany station under Section Director Ernest C. Johnson of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

The department's interest in weather began in 1932 when it was necessary for the city to have factual data on the quantity and intensity of rainfall to design sewers adequately and economically, the city engineer said.

At that time Hallinan installed a Ferguson Recording type rain gauge which recorded a graph showing the duration, intensity and quantity of precipitation on a synchronized chart as a permanent record.

None Others on Hand

There was no other recording gauge then except in New York city and Cornell University so that Kingston has the longest period of record of rainfall in the area covering all the storms of the last 19 years.

From these charts probability curves have been constructed for five, 10 and 15-year storms, which

Communists Told UN Will Not Take Russia as Neutral

Sub-Committee Will Go Over Problem, but No Good Results Expected

Munsan, Korea, April 2 (AP)—The Russian problem shifts to a higher level in Korea truce talks tomorrow but the allies announced it won't make any difference.

In their final word on the subject, allied staff officers told the Communists today that UN negotiators at any level will not accept Soviet Russia as a "neutral nation" to help police an armistice.

A sub-committee of top-ranking truce delegates will tackle the question at 11 a. m. tomorrow (9 p. m. tonight EST) at the Reds' request.

It will be the first time the sub-delegation on truce supervision has discussed Russia. The Communists first proposed Russia as a neutral supervising nation at a staff meeting Feb. 16. The sub-committee of delegates last met Jan. 27, when it reached an impasse on whether Reds would be permitted to rebuild airfields.

Arguments Repeated

Staff officers spent an hour Wednesday repeating well-worn arguments about Russia and the name to be used to designate Korea.

Col. Don O. Darrow, senior UN staff officer, said the allies would insist on designating Korea both as "Han Kuk" (the Han nation) and "Chosen" (Morning calm). An allied communique said he pointed out "it is absolutely essential that legal terms in this document be used for both sides."

The Reds replied that everyone would understand the meaning if only the word "Chosen" were used.

Both are time-honored names for Korea. The UN command objects to "Chosen" because the Japanese restored that as the official name of Korea during their 50 year occupation.

Another group of staff officers met in secret on prisoner exchange. It made no report. It meets again Thursday at the same time as the truce supervision sub-committee.

Casualties Are 106,956

Washington, April 2 (AP)—Announced U. S. battle casualties in Korea reached 106,956 today, an increase of 162 since last week.

Eisenhower Sees Need to Carry On Support Abroad

By PRESTON GROVER

Paris, April 2 (AP)—Gen. Eisenhower said today the United States needs to continue its support of European rearmament—but must get more results for the money.

The general's opinion was stated in his first annual report as commander of the North Atlantic Treaty defense forces. Americans looking at the report could speculate that he had one eye on the voters who later may be asked to put him in the White House.

"Europe must become self-sustaining in military manufacturers at the earliest possible date," he said. "America cannot continue to be the primary source of munitions for the entire free world.

"It would be fatuous for anyone to assume that the taxpayers of America will continue to pour money and resources into Europe unless encouraged by steady progress toward mutual cooperation and full effectiveness."

Believes in NATO

But the general left no doubt about his belief in NATO. Without it, he said, the future of the United States and Canada "could promise ever-greater danger of attack, requiring endless sacrifices and defense costs which

U. S. Sabres Kill Another Red Plane

Communists Display Little Desire to Fight Again

Seoul, Korea, April 2 (AP)—U. S. Sabre pilots today destroyed one MIG-15 and damaged two others of a Chinese Communist air force that showed little desire to fight after the rough handling it got yesterday.

The air force, after announcing the new kill, raised Tuesday's MIG casualty total by two more damaged, confirmed after evaluation of gun camera films. These raised the day's toll to 10 MIGs shot down, three probably destroyed and 12 damaged. It was the second biggest daily bag of the war for the Sabre pillots.

BusHearing Adjourns to April 8th

A hearing on the petition by the Kingston City Transportation Corporation to suspend operations of the Fairview-Lucas-Wilbur avenue lines was adjourned today until 10:30 a. m. Tuesday, April 8, at the court house.

At that time, the bus company will attempt to provide figures on its expenses for March and persons opposing the discontinuance of the bus service will be heard.

Corporation Counsel James G. Connelly today offered the bus company services of auditors to expedite the hearing and Thomas E. Gadd, general manager of the company, expressed appreciation and said he would avail himself of the offer if he needed the assistance.

Gadd Tells of Profit

Gadd, testifying at a hearing before Hearing Commissioner O'Brien of the Public Service Commission, today stated that since the suspension of the Lucas avenue-Fairview avenue and the Wilbur avenue bus lines had been in effect the company was operating at a profit.

Giving figures for January 1952, he said the net profit had been $562.06 and during February the profit was $517.17.

Efforts to place in evidence a statement of a corresponding period for 1951 were unsuccessful when Corporation Counsel James Connelly objected on the grounds those figures were not relevant to the present hearing which is on the application for permanent discontinuance of the two lines in question.

Louis P. Francello of Saugerties and Frank Campochiaro appeared for the petitioner bus company.

Cross-Examination Intimated

Gadd gave testimony as to revenue and expenditures for January and February since the two lines have been in temporary suspension. The March revenue figures were available but March expenses were not and the petitioner will be given an opportunity to supply those figures at a later hearing. Corporation Counsel Connelly intimated he would ask further adjournment to cross-examine the witness on the figures.

Expects Decrease

Gadd after testifying that the company was now operating at a profit since the discontinuance of the two lines, stated that he expected bus revenue to decrease with the coming summer months. He stated that the company would shortly need new equipment and said new buses cost about $10,000 each. Some of the present equipment is 16 years old.

The hearing was attended by more than 100 interested persons from the affected areas and Commissioner O'Brien agreed to take out of order testimony of some people who might have suggestions for improved service or other advice for consideration of the commission or the bus company.

Gadd said the company had operated at a loss of about $16,000 in 1951 when the two lines in

Storms Says Board Not Lax in Its Stand About Service

A Common Council prelude to expected local pressure at a Public Service Commission hearing here today on the city's current bus problem, ended last night with the aldermen on record against curtailment of service.

Alderman Benjamin A. Storms, second ward, offered a resolution which said that the aldermen are in favor of a continuation of bus service in sections of the city where the Kingston City Transportation Corp., has sought to discontinue service.

It was seconded by Alderman Robert C. Cullum, 12th ward, and unanimously adopted.

The hearing, scheduled to start at 11:30 a. m., today at the court house, was called to air the application of the bus company for permanent discontinuance of the Wilbur and Fairview-Lucas runs, which had been out of service since last Dec. 26 on a trial basis.

Offers Resolution

Storms offered the resolution after he had hit back at charges that the councilmen had been lax in efforts to solve the bus problem.

The alderman said he "wholeheartedly agreed" with those who spoke from the audience against curtailed bus service and he felt that he and other aldermen had been working toward whatever can be done to solve the problem.

Third Ward Alderman Edwin Radel and Joseph F. Wenzel, fourth ward, who had sought extensions of service, he said, have

$75,000 Injury Claim Is Filed

Former Mayor's Daughter Says She Was Hurt in Local Park

A claim of $75,000 for injuries suffered in a toboggan ride at Hasbrouck Park was filed by Miss Sheila M. Carey, of 179 Tremper avenue, daughter of former Mayor Eugene B. Carey, with the Common Council last night.

Information with the claim, filed through the law firm of Flanagan and Ortale, said that on last Dec. 23 while the claimant was coasting in the park on a toboggan it had struck a mound of macadam.

Miss Carey suffered back, leg and other injuries and was hospitalized 20 days. She had been in a plaster cast, was forced to wear a steel back support, and will be "totally disabled for an indefinite time," the information said.

Mrs. Julia F. Sinnott, of 42 Lafayette avenue, filed a claim of $643.33 for injuries suffered in a fall on ice near 28 Lafayette avenue last Dec. 30, and Charles W. Johnson, of Ulster Park filed one for $24.61 for car damages which,

Wire Systems' Strikes Due To Commence at Midnight

Washington, April 2 (AP)—The nation's telegraph and telephone systems braced today for a series of threatened strikes due to start at midnight.

Approximately 30,000 Western Union employes were set to walk off the job across the country. A top official in their union, the AFL Commercial Telegraphers Union (CTU), said "there definitely will be a strike as matters now stand."

Adolph Brungs, head of the CTU's Western Union division, told reporters the only chance of averting a walkout would be "a proposal by the company acceptable to the union."

The CIO Communications Workers of America (CWA) has called a strike of more than 40,000 American Telephone and Telegraph Workers in Ohio, Michigan and northern California for tomorrow morning. And 16,000 Western Electric Co. employes in 43 states have scheduled a strike for Monday. Western Electric is a subsidiary of A. T. & T. and its employes are also represented by the CWA.

If the Western Union strike comes off as scheduled, it is expected to cripple telegraph facilities from coast to coast, with the exception of New York city. Employes there belong to another union. But even in New York the CTU is preparing to set up picket lines in an effort to make the shutdown airtight.

The union is demanding a 16-cent across-the-board wage boost. It also wants its work week re-

Democrat Is Up 36 Over Opponents

Kerr Concedes Defeat in Nebraska; GOP There May Go Taft at Convention

Aid Is Promised

Stassen, Warren May Shift Support to Eisenhower

(By The Associated Press)

Senators Robert A. Taft and Estes Kefauver, scoring heavily in primaries in Wisconsin and Nebraska, opened up big leads today in the race for delegates to the Presidential nominating conventions.

Taft, the Republican from Ohio won by 50,000 votes over his nearest competitor in the Wisconsin primary yesterday. That gave him 24 of the state's 30 delegates to the Chicago convention.

He held a smaller margin in Nebraska—about 5,000—but the trend indicated an apparent Taft victory there, too.

Kefauver, the Democrat from Tennessee, won by a thumping majority in Wisconsin. He was 180,000 votes ahead of his closest foe. And he locked Sen. Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma in Nebraska, the first state where Kerr was entered as a candidate.

Concedes Defeat

Kerr conceded defeat in Nebraska shortly after daybreak. He said Kefauver "has evidently won the popularity contest for which I congratulate him."

Kefauver picked up 28 delegates in Wisconsin.

Nebraska's delegates—18 Republicans and 12 Democrats—were not committed to vote for anyone at the conventions.

There was a strong likelihood, though, that at least 16 of the 18 GOP delegates would go for Taft at the convention. They had indicated they would abide by the results of the popularity voting.

The division was not clear among the Democrats. Both Kefauver and Kerr seemed likely to get the support of five delegates each.

Taft won all 10 at-large delegates in Wisconsin. His slate won out, too, in 14 of 20 district races. Gov. Earl Warren of California got the other six delegates. Former Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, victor in Wisconsin four years ago, got none.

No Write-In Allowed

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's name was not on the ballot in that state. Write-in votes were prohibited. But Warren backers said if their man failed to show strength at the convention, they would switch to Eisenhower. Stassen promised to split his delegate strength with the general.

Stassen's name was on the ballot in Nebraska; Taft's and Eisenhower's weren't. But Stassen was running a poor third in the popularity contest there.

There were two hot races in Nebraska for the GOP nomination for senator. Sen. Hugh Butler, 74, who is regarded as a Taft man, defeated Gov. Val Peterson, considered an Eisenhower booster, in one contest Butler is seeking his third term in the Senate.

In the other race, to fill out the last two years of the term of the late Sen. Kenneth Wherry, former Gov. Dwight Griswold, won the nomination.

Against Two Slates

In Wisconsin, Kefauver was matched against two delegate slates which had pledged support to President Truman before Truman announced he wouldn't run last week.

With returns from less than 100 of the state's 3,204 precincts missing, Taft had 306,277 votes,

New York, April 2 (AP)—The steel industry announced today it would start negotiating with the CIO United Steel Workers Union tomorrow with the price situation "the big issue" standing between a settlement and a strike.

The talks originally were scheduled for Monday, but were stalled for three days.

Soon after the industry announcement, John A. Stephens, U. S. Steel Corp. vice president, told a news conference the industry would try hard to avert a strike of 650,000 steelworkers tentatively set for April 8.

Price Is Big Issue

"The price situation is the big issue," Stephens said.

Stephens referred to the industry's contention that it needs a $12-a-ton boost in steel prices to meet wage increases and other benefits recommended for the workers by the Wage Stabilization Board.

The industry has been trying in Washington to obtain consent of wage stabilization officials to such an increase. The government has contended a $2 hike is all that can be granted.

Stephens said "equity" was a "fundamental" of the nation's stabilization program and that this meant the industry needed the price increase to balance increased labor costs.

"If there is no equity," he said, "the companies would be foolhardy and derelict in their duty if they tried to absorb costs when they know this would spell ruin for the companies."

Condition Is Unchanged

Washington, April 2 (AP)—The condition of James W. Wadsworth, former senator and representative from New York, continued unchanged today. "He appears to be about the same; if anything, he might be a little weaker," a family friend told a reporter. Wadsworth, 74, is suffering from a long-standing abdominal ailment. He entered Emergency Hospital several weeks ago.

Pupils Are Questioned

Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy questioned a group of pupils at School No. 4 after a false alarm was sounded from Box 2221 at 12:41 p. m., today at Delaware and Lindsley avenues. The chief indicated it was known definitely that the alarm had been sounded by a youngster but he was unable to determine immediately who had done it.

Keenan Sworn As Ambassador

One of Stop-Russia Group Will Go to Moscow; Succeeds Kirk

Washington, April 2 (AP)—Diplomat George F. Kennan, one of the authors of America's stop-Russia policy, was sworn in today as ambassador to Moscow. He promised to work for an easing of tensions between the Communist and western worlds and "the improvement of the international atmosphere."

"Those are objectives which seem to me urgently desirable and I see no reason why they should not be within the realm of possibility, if the desire is reciprocated," he said in a prepared statement.

Trusted Adviser

Kennan is one of the administration's most trusted advisers on relations with the Soviet Union.

Government Rests In Costello Case

Gambler Might Not Go on Stand, Counsel Indicates

New York, April 2 (AP)—The government today rested its case against gambler Frank Costello, charged with contempt of the U. S. Senate for refusing to answer questions before the Senate Crime Committee last year.

The prosecution case took three days. The defense was expected to be brief. Defense attorneys said they did not expect to call Costello as a witness.

Not Necessarily So

Earlier, Federal Judge Sylvester Ryan commented that the fact that a senator deemed an act contemptuous did not necessarily make it so.

Ryan offered his comment during a courtroom discussion of technical questions during the absence of the jury.

The discussion centered around how much of the committee hearing transcript should be submitted to the jury.

The defense contended some of the transcript was prejudicial to the defendant, including comments from committee members.

His Second Trial

Costello is being tried on the charge for the second time, the jury disagreed in the first trial.

Judge Tells Him He Wishes He Could Sentence Him to Death

New York, April 2 (AP)—Bank robber Willie Sutton was sentenced today as a fourth offender to 30 years to life imprisonment by a judge who said he wishes he could sentence him to death.

Judge Louis Goldstein said in sentencing Sutton:

"I only regret that the law prevents me from sentencing you to death."

Sutton, who had pleaded guilty to a gun carrying charge, stood, blinking, and handcuffed to two

U. S. Sabres Kill Another Red Plane

Communists Display Little Desire to Fight Again

Seoul, Korea, April 2 (AP)—U. S. Sabre pilots today destroyed one MIG-15 and damaged two others of a Chinese Communist air force that showed little desire to fight after the rough handling it got yesterday.

The air force, after announcing the new kill, raised Tuesday's MIG casualty total by two more damaged, confirmed after evaluation of gun camera films. These raised the day's toll to 10 MIGs shot down, three probably destroyed and 12 damaged. It was the second biggest daily bag of the war for the Sabre pillots.

Having Their Say

Wire Systems' Strikes Due To Commence at Midnight

Washington, April 2 (AP)—The nation's telegraph and telephone systems braced today for a series of threatened strikes due to start at midnight.

Approximately 30,000 Western Union employes were set to walk off the job across the country. A top official in their union, the AFL Commercial Telegraphers Union (CTU), said "there definitely will be a strike as matters now stand."

Adolph Brungs, head of the CTU's Western Union division, told reporters the only chance of averting a walkout would be "a proposal by the company acceptable to the union."

The CIO Communications Workers of America (CWA) has called a strike of more than 40,000 American Telephone and Telegraph Workers in Ohio, Michigan and northern California for tomorrow morning. And 16,000 Western Electric Co. employes in 43 states have scheduled a strike for Monday. Western Electric is a subsidiary of A. T. & T. and its employes are also represented by the CWA.

If the Western Union strike comes off as scheduled, it is expected to cripple telegraph facilities from coast to coast, with the exception of New York city. Employes there belong to another union. But even in New York the CTU is preparing to set up picket lines in an effort to make the shutdown airtight.

The union is demanding a 16-cent across-the-board wage boost. It also wants its work week re-

been active as has Alderman Cullum with the current problem in the 12th ward.

Cites Authority Given

If the aldermen had not been interested, Storms said, "they would not have empowered the corporation counsel to obtain an accountant to look over the books" of the bus company.

The corporation counsel, he said, is the legal representative of all of the people of the city, and meanwhile, the aldermen cannot take action pending the outcome of the hearing.

Frank Reis, of 29 Grand View avenue, one of the speakers in the audience, suggested that Storms express his sentiments in the form of a motion, and after some further discussion, the alderman offered the resolution.

Last night's discussion of the problem was opened by James E. Martin, 12th ward supervisor, who had appeared at other council sessions to argue against reduced bus service.

Walter Donnaruma, of 143 Franklin street, and Howard Fox of Grand View avenue also spoke against curtailed bus service and letters from the Ulster County Real Estate Board and the Kingston Merchants' Association, expressing their opposition were read and referred to the corporation counsel for use at the public hearing.

Would Have Loop Line

Another letter signed merely BBG, suggested that the bus company continue the Broadway line as now, but "discontinue the Hasbrouck avenue line as a unit."

The latter, it said, was a "descendant" of the old Colonial Trolley line. This the writer would replace with a loop line with transfer stations at the Strand and Hasbrouck avenue and at the post office and YMCA in mid town.

The route from the YMCA would go over Pine Grove avenue, Mary's and Montrepose avenues, West Pierpont, Hone and Abeel streets to Broadway and the Strand and over the Strand to North street to Delaware avenue, over that street to Hasbrouck, to Grand street to the post office and the YMCA.

Better yet, it said, if running time permits, would be to go over Hasbrouck to Garden to Smith avenue and Cornell to Broadway and Cedar where there would be another transfer point.

Referred to Counsel

This, with the other letters and suggestions was referred to the corporation counsel.

Supervisor Martin, who, as he had done on two other recent occasions, charged that the "Common Council has been remiss" by not considering the possibility that "another group might be willing to furnish the satisfactory service which is now denied," asked if it was not possible that the council could meet "as a public hearing body."

This, he suggested, would be "for an open discussion upon the possibility of cancelling or modifying the present franchise—or for a protest by legal action, instituted by the corporation counsel as a representative of our citizens, if necessary, against presently constituted unsatisfactory schedules."

Donnarumma, who indicated he was interested in the problem largely because of the effect of poor bus service on property development, declared: "As a professional builder I am very reluctant to carry on any further operations in Kingston."

16 Families Brought

His projects, he said, brought 16 families to the city, and in considering developments that would mean homes for 50 more families, he said he was undecided whether to build them in the city or move to the town of Ulster.

In that town, he said, the children get transportation to school, while in Kingston children often have to walk long distances.

The bus company, he held, because it holds a franchise "owes a debt to the community," and he indicated that if it could not supply adequate service, he has a client who is interested.

Reis, who said he felt the aldermen were "passing the buck," asked, "Let's not be on the fence and passing the buck, let's be on record at the public hearing."

The council, he held, "is the only place any taxpayer has recourse because as a body you represent the city."

Reis said he noticed that the different letters read at the session were referred to the corporation counsel, although "all were addressed for action by this governing body."

In Hands for Hearing

Alderman Abram Relyea, 11th ward, who was elected to preside at the session in the absence of Alderman-at-large Joseph Kelly, explained that the letters were referred to the corporation counsel "because of the urgency of the matter." He wanted them "to be in the corporation counsel's hands" for the hearing, and if he had referred them to the railroad and bus committee, the procedure might be delayed.

Howard Fox expressed himself as "amazed at the nonchalance" of the councilmen, and he asked if the corporation counsel was going to the hearing not knowing how the council stood on the bus problem. He said he and other citizens would like to know "how you gentlemen stand on it."

The letter from the Ulster County Real Estate Board said that suspension of bus service hampers the growth of the city. Many are desirous of selling their homes and others have cancelled building plans. Realtors have experienced a "decided reluctance" to buy properties with no bus service, and it felt that it would be to "the best interests of the city" if the service were restored.

Cut Is Protested

The Kingston Merchants Association's letter protested that cutting off the Wilbur and Fairview-Lucas runs meant a hardship to local residents in the areas served. Unless they have the use of an automobile, it said, they have no means of transportation, and children of the areas are also subjected to inconveniences.

The writer of the letter signed BBG., said he (or she) was not familiar with the uptown loop, but he felt there could be rerouting so that there would be no duplication of the Hasbrouck avenue and Fairview-Lucas runs.

"The problem of the bus company," the letter said, "is a real financial crisis because of the widely spread city and the many car owners." It suggested better rates, more promotion and closer cooperation between the county and city officials and the Public Service Commission.

Abandonment of the two bus runs, it said, virtually brings the city back "to the horse car age." It suggested that "constructive agitation might help" the city "more than glorying in its past history."

The aldermen authorized the corporation counsel to hire an accountant to inspect the books of the Kingston City Transportation Corp., prior to today's public hearing.

A petition signed by more than 1,100 residents of the 12th Ward and another with nearly 300 names of residents of the 13th Ward, asking restoration of the Wilbur and Fairview-Lucas bus runs, were read and filed at the session.

duced from 48 to 40 hours, with no reduction in pay. The two demands together are estimated to cost 50 cents an hour for each employe.

So far the company has made no offer. It contends it is not in a position to increase wages, now averaging about $1.63 an hour.

The CWA, headed by Joseph A. Beirne, is demanding "substantial" wage boosts, but Beirne has avoided pinpointing them. Average wage for telephone workers is around $1.53 an hour, the union says.

Some 1,250 communications workers already have walked off the job at Western Electric's Tonawanda, N. Y., plant, in a strike over new contract demands.

The Western Electric units set to strike Monday are nation-wide. They include 10,000 installation employes and 5,000 in sales departments in 43 states and the District of Columbia, as well as 250 workers in the Queensboro manufacturing plant in New York.

Council Takes . . .

been active as has Alderman Cullum with the current problem in the 12th ward.

Cites Authority Given

If the aldermen had not been interested, Storms said, "they would not have empowered the corporation counsel to obtain an accountant to look over the books" of the bus company.

The corporation counsel, he said, is the legal representative of all of the people of the city, and meanwhile, the aldermen cannot take action pending the outcome of the hearing.

Frank Reis, of 29 Grand View avenue, one of the speakers in the audience, suggested that Storms express his sentiments in the form of a motion, and after some further discussion, the alderman offered the resolution.

Last night's discussion of the problem was opened by James E. Martin, 12th ward supervisor, who had appeared at other council sessions to argue against reduced bus service.

Walter Donnaruma, of 143 Franklin street, and Howard Fox of Grand View avenue also spoke against curtailed bus service and letters from the Ulster County Real Estate Board and the Kingston Merchants' Association, expressing their opposition were read and referred to the corporation counsel for use at the public hearing.

Would Have Loop Line

Another letter signed merely BBG, suggested that the bus company continue the Broadway line as now, but "discontinue the Hasbrouck avenue line as a unit."

The latter, it said, was a "descendant" of the old Colonial Trolley line. This the writer would replace with a loop line with transfer stations at the Strand and Hasbrouck avenue and at the post office and YMCA in mid town.

The route from the YMCA would go over Pine Grove avenue, Mary's and Montrepose avenues, West Pierpont, Hone and Abeel streets to Broadway and the Strand and over the Strand to North street to Delaware avenue, over that street to Hasbrouck, to Grand street to the post office and the YMCA.

Better yet, it said, if running time permits, would be to go over Hasbrouck to Garden to Smith avenue and Cornell to Broadway and Cedar where there would be another transfer point.

Referred to Counsel

This, with the other letters and suggestions was referred to the corporation counsel.

Supervisor Martin, who, as he had done on two other recent occasions, charged that the "Common Council has been remiss" by not considering the possibility that "another group might be willing to furnish the satisfactory service which is now denied," asked if it was not possible that the council could meet "as a public hearing body."

This, he suggested, would be "for an open discussion upon the possibility of cancelling or modifying the present franchise—or for a protest by legal action, instituted by the corporation counsel as a representative of our citizens, if necessary, against presently constituted unsatisfactory schedules."

Donnarumma, who indicated he was interested in the problem largely because of the effect of poor bus service on property development, declared: "As a professional builder I am very reluctant to carry on any further operations in Kingston."

16 Families Brought

His projects, he said, brought 16 families to the city, and in considering developments that would mean homes for 50 more families, he said he was undecided whether to build them in the city or move to the town of Ulster.

In that town, he said, the children get transportation to school, while in Kingston children often have to walk long distances.

The bus company, he held, because it holds a franchise "owes a debt to the community," and he indicated that if it could not supply adequate service, he has a client who is interested.

Reis, who said he felt the aldermen were "passing the buck," asked, "Let's not be on the fence and passing the buck, let's be on record at the public hearing."

The council, he held, "is the only place any taxpayer has recourse because as a body you represent the city."

Reis said he noticed that the different letters read at the session were referred to the corporation counsel, although "all were addressed for action by this governing body."

In Hands for Hearing

Alderman Abram Relyea, 11th ward, who was elected to preside at the session in the absence of Alderman-at-large Joseph Kelly, explained that the letters were referred to the corporation counsel "because of the urgency of the matter." He wanted them "to be in the corporation counsel's hands" for the hearing, and if he had referred them to the railroad and bus committee, the procedure might be delayed.

Howard Fox expressed himself as "amazed at the nonchalance" of the councilmen, and he asked if the corporation counsel was going to the hearing not knowing how the council stood on the bus problem. He said he and other citizens would like to know "how you gentlemen stand on it."

The letter from the Ulster County Real Estate Board said that suspension of bus service hampers the growth of the city. Many are desirous of selling their homes and others have cancelled building plans. Realtors have experienced a "decided reluctance" to buy properties with no bus service, and it felt that it would be to "the best interests of the city" if the service were restored.

Cut Is Protested

The Kingston Merchants Association's letter protested that cutting off the Wilbur and Fairview-Lucas runs meant a hardship to local residents in the areas served. Unless they have the use of an automobile, it said, they have no means of transportation, and children of the areas are also subjected to inconveniences.

The writer of the letter signed BBG., said he (or she) was not familiar with the uptown loop, but he felt there could be rerouting so that there would be no duplication of the Hasbrouck avenue and Fairview-Lucas runs.

"The problem of the bus company," the letter said, "is a real financial crisis because of the widely spread city and the many car owners." It suggested better rates, more promotion and closer cooperation between the county and city officials and the Public Service Commission.

Abandonment of the two bus runs, it said, virtually brings the city back "to the horse car age." It suggested that "constructive agitation might help" the city "more than glorying in its past history."

The aldermen authorized the corporation counsel to hire an accountant to inspect the books of the Kingston City Transportation Corp., prior to today's public hearing.

A petition signed by more than 1,100 residents of the 12th Ward and another with nearly 300 names of residents of the 13th Ward, asking restoration of the Wilbur and Fairview-Lucas bus runs, were read and filed at the session.

duced from 48 to 40 hours, with no reduction in pay. The two demands together are estimated to cost 50 cents an hour for each employe.

So far the company has made no offer. It contends it is not in a position to increase wages, now averaging about $1.63 an hour.

The CWA, headed by Joseph A. Beirne, is demanding "substantial" wage boosts, but Beirne has avoided pinpointing them. Average wage for telephone workers is around $1.53 an hour, the union says.

Some 1,250 communications workers already have walked off the job at Western Electric's Tonawanda, N. Y., plant, in a strike over new contract demands.

The Western Electric units set to strike Monday are nation-wide. They include 10,000 installation employes and 5,000 in sales departments in 43 states and the District of Columbia, as well as 250 workers in the Queensboro manufacturing plant in New York.

AID FROM INDUSTRY

Leaders in the transportation industries in Ohio have agreed to assist John Carroll University in a program designed to train students in practical as well as academic aspects of transportation. The University allows students to major in transportation as preparation for a degree in business administration. The Erie Railroad has donated three freight cars to the R.O.T.C. unit at John Carroll to help the cadets study the problem of loading and unloading military supplies.

The idea of integrating college study with experience in industry is a sound one. Many of the men and women who study in the universities and colleges will eventually seek careers in industry and a program designed to give them experience while they study is certain to be helpful.

Industry is beginning to realize its responsibility toward education. This realization is being expressed in scholarships and grants to deserving students. Assistance for colleges in practical programs is also an important contribution.

WOMEN IN DENIM

The man who goes to work in denim overalls will be dressed in style this year, at least as far as choice of fabric is concerned. Denim has always been considered a useful, durable material, but until recently it was generally reserved for work clothes. Now fashion authorities say that it will be one of the most popular fabrics for women's clothes during 1952. Smart evening dresses as well as sport clothes will be manufactured from denim.

Many men may deplore the path that fashion has taken. Denim has always been regarded as a rather masculine material, a sort of uniform that a man who got his hands dirty when he worked could wear with pride. Now that it will be fancied up a bit it may not be so popular with the working man. The debutante who trips off to an afternoon tea and the plumber who passes her with his lunch box may be clad in matching costumes. Who said this wasn't a classless country?

THE WILL ROGERS STORY

Fans of the late Will Rogers, actor and humorist, will be looking forward to the release of a picture based on his life. Rogers will be played by his son Will Rogers, Jr., an ex-congressman. Those who remember the lank figure of the father on stage with a patter of home-spun humor and an assortment of tricks with a lasso, may wonder whether the son's resemblance is more than physical.

Will Rogers for some time wrote a syndicated newspaper column which attracted wide readership. His wit was always gentle although he had a way of shattering the pretentious and deflating the pompous. When he was killed in an airplane crash in 1935 while flying with Wiley Post in Alaska he was mourned by millions who felt they knew him from his column, as well as from his stage and movie appearances. His name may yet produce a measure of box-office magic when his life story is released with his son in the starring role.

The first step to take to preserve something should be to deserve it.

NEGRO SCHOOLS

The South is recognizing its obligation to educate its Negro citizens satisfactorily. In the last 10 years, according to a survey made by the New York Times, the progress has been remarkable. In Florida in 1941-42 white teachers averaged $1,006 annual salary, Negro teachers $597. Now both get the same amount, estimated at $2,785.

During the present academic year Florida plans to spend $9,000,000 for white schools and $10,000,000 for Negro schools. The Alabama State Superintendent of Education reports that the salaries paid Negro teachers have increased five-fold since 1942. A like report comes from Arkansas.

Skeptics may say that Negro school facilities were so far behind the white that much more money could be spent in improving the Negro educational status and still leave it inferior. This is true in some localities; but it is also true that the South is making a strong effort to remedy old injustices.

'These Days'

By GEORGE SOKOLSKY

"MY SON JOHN"

Some people go to the movies only for amusement; some like to learn in addition to being amused. I have been thinking about that recently, because I have seen more movies than usual. I think that I only go to movies for entertainment.

But what entertains one, may bore another. For instance, I have known men who swear that they never cry; yet, I have witnessed them sobbing at a picture—and enjoying it. I must admit that I could not restrain tears on both occasions when I saw "My Son John." The first time, I saw it with Fulton Oursler and his dear wife and my little daughter. The second time, I saw it with a party of devoted souls who fight Communism.

The management said that they hoped that we would not advertise this picture as a propaganda film; that we would speak of it as entertainment. I do not make such distinctions. If a film can hold my interest not once but twice, if it can move me so that I bring 50 friends to a preview, if it can grip adults and children alike, if its message reaches the heart--it is excellent theatre whatever it has to say.

Leo McCarey, who wrote and directed this picture, is a man who not only loves his country but has a whimsical sense of story. He catches life in motion and makes it not only meaningful but interesting.

"My Son John" is the simple story of an American family. It might be your family or mine. It might happen to boys or to girls anywhere in our land. It might be applied in a myriad of ways. And because it is so universal in our lives, this picture becomes a mirror in which each human being sees his own situation and wonders what he might have done so that tragedy had not come to his doorstep.

This is the story of a good family that produced a traitor. Good families have produced pickpockets and wayward girls, but traitors have been rare in American life. In the schoolbooks, we read of Benedict Arnold as a traitor, and of Nathan Hale as a hero. But until recent years, we never thought that anyone close to us, a son, a daughter, a brother, might be a traitor. Yet, Alger Hiss and half a dozen other Americans, people like us in most respects, have been convicted of acts involving treason.

And there are many who still do not believe that they were traitors because they cannot believe that any American would hate his country or do it harm. America is, after all, such a good country and we have such great benefits and privileges and advantages here.

So this is a tragedy that comes into the life of a fine American family, and were it written and directed by an ordinary person, it would probably have been merely interesting. Leo McCarey, however, is not an ordinary writer or director. He is a fervent, an exciting person who pours life into ideas. Richness of characterization is not unusual among modern directors, but an understanding of the mind, the thinking, the suffering of the soul of those who want to change and dare not—that only one who has himself suffered can understand.

The more sensitive the person, the greater are his doubts and fears. The character, John, obviously is tortured throughout by the conflict between ideas and the spirit and in the end returns to God.

It was interesting to see how an audience made up of fine minds reacted to this picture. No one could fail to live through the emotions of Helen Hayes, who played the mother. It was impossible not to watch every gesture of Robert Walker, who played John. Every supporting actor becomes a star in this picture.

Yet, this audience divided down the middle on the return to God. Those who had themselves been tortured by the compulsion to change their natures find in this picture high drama which forced one true man to say, "There but for the grace of God, am I."

Those who had shifted their positions in life without God's guidance, found it only another movie—just good entertainment. To me, it is an elevation of the art of the motion picture to the quality of the best in the theatre.

VITAMINS FOR THE ELDERLY

We do not hear or read as much about vitamins today as we did up to a year ago. It would seem that both patients and physicians are not as interested as they were. This is unfortunate because vitamins and also minerals—iron, phosphorous, calcium—are needed daily to maintain health and fitness.

Now that we have more old people in our midst than any other one group, physicians, and especially geriatricians whose specialty is the treatment of elderly people, are finding that not enough of certain vitamins are being eaten to maintain health.

In The Journal of the American Medical Association in the Question and Answer department, it is stated: "Medical science is becoming more and more concerned with diseases and disorders in relation to the age groups, industrial groups and population groups affected, rather than with specific diseases. More recently the science of gerontology (the treatment of the elderly) has come to the fore as one of the most important new fields of investigation from a medical, sociological and economic point of view."

Unfortunately many of us feel that as people become older they must expect changes in their physical, mental and emotional make-up and must simply learn to live with these changes and disorders. As a matter of fact, experimental studies by nutrition experts seem to point to the fact that an adequate intake of vitamins is necessary to health at all ages and will delay these changes and disorders we blame on old age.

Dr. W. H. Sebrell, in his book "Geriatric Medicine" points out that scaly dry skin is often due to lack of vitamin A and foods rich in this vitamin should be eaten for months till the skin becomes normal. Foods rich in vitamin A are fish liver oils, carrots, yellow squash, sweet potatoes, spinach and cabbage (kale).

Symptoms of vitamin B deficiency, particularly B1 and B complex, include constipation, muscle pains, poor appetite, nervousness, red tongue. Foods rich in vitamin B1 and B complex are lean beef, liver, beet greens, peas, dried prunes, wheat germ, spinach.

Lack of vitamin C may cause spongy, swollen or bleeding gums, bleeding under skin from slight injuries. Foods rich in vitamin C are oranges, lemons, grapefruit, raw cabbage, tomatoes and potatoes.

Lack of vitamin D in the elderly causes softening of the bones, early fatigue, pains in ribs and small of back, irregular teeth. No natural foods contain enough vitamin D for body needs. However, fish oils (cod and halibut), viosterol, or tablets of calcium gluconate or lactate should be taken daily if symptoms occur. Foods considered rich in vitamin D are butter, egg yolk, liver, irradiated foods (in which vitamin is not destroyed by ordinary cooking).

In Step

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

Washington—Friends of President Truman attribute the following reasons for his historic decision not to run again.

First, the wishes of Mrs. Truman; 2. His age—he would have been, if elected, the oldest President ever to take the oath of office; 3. The advice of party leaders, including Speaker Sam Rayburn and Chief Justice Fred Vinson; 4. The embarrassing setback given him by Senator Kefauver in New Hampshire; and finally, the prospect that he would have to run against his old friend, General Eisenhower.

For a long time the President has indicated to members of his family and to his closer friends that he did not want to run. More recently he intimated to one close intimate that the barrage of criticism was getting on his nerves and he wanted to get out.

"There are too many b---–s in this business," he aid.

Probably only three or four of his friends really knew how he felt, one of them being the chief justice, whom the President had urged to be the Democratic nominee himself.

At one time, approximately nine to twelve months ago, it was Mr. Truman's plan to appoint the chief justice to a key post in the administration such as secretary of state or defense mobilizer in order to give him a springboard to the presidency. This was to get around the fact that the chief justice has held a vigorous view that court should not be a springboard into politics and that no man should step from the court into an active candidacy for any office even the presidency.

This plan was sidetracked in part by Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin, though McCarthy to this day probably doesn't realize it. However, the constant barrage of criticism fired at Dean Acheson made it imperative in the mind of Mr. Truman, whose loyalty to his friends is legion, that Acheson be continued at the helm of the State Department.

Later, as time passed, the chief justice felt it was too late for him to step into another office as a springboard to the presidency. Not enough months remained before the campaign.

Taft Tempted Truman

It was at this point—approximately around December and January—that President Truman seriously reconsidered changing his mind about running. This period coincided with Senator Taft's reputed gains of delegates and when the Eisenhower backers were discouraged. At that time, it looked as if Taft would be the Republican nominee, and nothing has titillated Truman's political nostrils more than the idea of defeating his old critic and enemy, Bob Taft.

This itching on the President's part to take on Senator Taft was what caused some of his most revered political friends, including Speaker Rayburn and the chief justice, to urge him not to run. The chief justice and Speaker Rayburn discussed the matter privately and later the chief justice was selected as the man to present their joint view to the President.

This view was that Harry Truman would go down in history as a great president, if for nothing else, because of his courageous foreign policy. Historians, the chief justice is understood to have told the President, would overlook the petty political bickering and the corruption issue and would focus attention upon Truman's courage in saving Greece and Turkey from communism, in putting across the Marshall Plan and in conceiving the North Atlantic Pact for the defense of western Europe. It would also give him credit for his courageous stand on civil rights.

But if he ran again, Truman's friends believed, the Democratic Party would be torn asunder, first over the civil-rights issue, also in part over foreign policy.

The campaign would give the Republicans a chance to attack that foreign policy as was not done in the 1948 campaign when Senator Vandenberg was alive. Thus, it was pointed out, Truman's great milestones against communism might be plowed under.

This advice by Democrats of great standing in the party is reported to have offset the importuning of the palace guard that the President should run again. A few weeks thereafter came Eisenhower's show of strength in New Hampshire and the victory of Senator Kefauver which clinched Mr. Truman's decision.

Ike Was Feared

Of all these deterrent factors, perhaps the most important was the probability that Mr. Truman would have to run against Eisenhower.

Friends of the President who sat with him on the "back porch" of the White House in June 1948 recalled how worried he was over the prospect that Eisenhower would consent to have his name entered in the Democratic convention in Chicago. Truman made no secret of his belief that Ike could take the Democratic convention by storm, and he stewed mentally over some means of taking Eisenhower out of the race.

It was on this particular evening that George Allen was sent to New York to get a letter from the general guaranteeing that he would not run. Simultaneously another close friend of the President telephoned Milton Eisenhower, the general's brother, also to get an assurance that Ike was not a candidate.

Almost four years later, in the late summer of 1951, Truman again took confidential steps to make sure he would not face Eisenhower as a candidate. He remembered first a commitment he had made to Ike through their mutual friend, George Allen, in 1948—that if Ike wanted to run in '52, he, Truman would help him. He also doubtless remembered how formidable Ike would be as a candidate.

Therefore, the President invited George Allen for a cruise on the yacht Williamsburg in order to talk about their mutual friend in Paris.

Truman told Allen that he considered the North Atlantic Pact one of the most important cornerstones for world peace and that Eisenhower's leadership was essential to it. He added that he was worried over Republican statements that Eisenhower was available for the GOP nomination, and he felt that both the United States and our allies should know whether Ike was running the North Atlantic Pact or running for President.

Truman further suggested that two were not compatible, and that if Eisenhower really wanted to be President, he would be much more at home in the Democratic party than with the Republicans. Furthermore, the President indicated that, as a Democrat, Ike would not have to run openly, but could be "summoned" to the presidency. Truman even hinted that he might like to make the nominating speech himself.

Finally, the President suggested that George Allen fly to Paris and have a heart-to-heart talk with Eisenhower.

Allen countered by suggesting that Mr. Truman write a friendly note to Ike summarizing his views which he, Allen, would deliver in Paris.

This was done. Allen delivered the note and reported to the White House later: First, that Eisenhower would not quit the North Atlantic Pact in the near future; second, that the NATO job would be completed by this spring; third, that if he did run, he would talk to Truman first. And in conclusion, Ike sent word that in any event, he was a Republican.

Economic Debacle Worse Than 1929 Rests Next Few Days With White House Action

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, April 2—America is moving slowly toward an economic catastrophe which may be worse than the one that was ushered in back in 1929.

The decision whether such a disaster shall be averted rests with White House action in the next few days. The 10-year depression period—1929 to 1939—started with very little warning. At least, the nation was not prepared for it.

The next crash will come in a matter of months—not years—if the White House persists in driving to the edge of the precipice. The nation will be able to see the cycle start. No one will be able to say this time that no warning note was sounded.

The first steps in the cycle of disintegration will come with a steel strike. This is due to start next week. Then will come seizure of the steel companies by the government.

Immediately after seizure, the government will surrender to the unions by ordering the recommendations of the Truman Stabilization Board to be put into effect at once.

The financial structure of the steel companies thus will be sabotaged. Their stockholders will interpret this to mean that from now on the government intends to allow unlimited wages to union workers, but will refuse to pay fair wages to the investors.

When this happens, it is the beginning of the end of the free-enterprise system. Investors generally will lose confidence. For the same pattern followed in steel will be exhibited to all industries—higher and higher wages will have to be paid or seizure will be the penalty.

With a rising wage level and no offsetting of costs through higher prices, it is only a question of a few months before the backbone of the entire defense program in America—the steel industry—will have its back to the wall. Stalin could hope for nothing more useful to his purpose.

President Truman is being advised that he must not permit any price increase in steel, and that the companies must absorb all wage increases out of current profits. Actually there is a basis for compromise in a modest wage increase and a moderate increase in prices.

What Mr. Truman may do this very week, therefore, is to set the wage levels for the lean years that must come when the defense program tapers off. Peace is always a possibility and any decided turn for the better in the international situation can catch the American economy in a trap.

High wage levels cannot be deflated. Instead of allowing the steel companies to build a reserve and to accumulate funds now to buy new machinery so as to operate more efficiently and to reduce prices, especially for future construction needs, the President is being told by Economic Advisor Leon Keyserling that he now can boost the wage levels to unprecedented heights. It was Mr. Keyserling who upset the applecart on Mr. Truman's return from Key West by telling him the steel companies could pay the wage increases based on "normal profits" and "normal operations."

His reasoning has not been divulged, but it is not in accord with facts put in evidence at the recent hearings.

The Keyserling formula means that the government will lose hundreds of millions in tax money. Other sources of revenue will have to be found. The stockholders in steel will face a wage cut. It means, moreover, that such a high level of wages will have been forced upon the steel industry that, with the slightest contraction of defense orders, there will be extensive casualties among the marginal steel companies. This will result in widespread unemployment and further loss of tax money.

The design for an economic crash is being made this very week in Washington. The 1929 debacle was the result of over-speculation by private citizens, but the crash that lies ahead will be government-made. It is doubtful how much of the wreckage a new administration taking office in 1953 can possibly repair. The momentum of a downward cycle is hard to arrest. It can be stopped in its tracks now if Mr. Truman will allow an impartial group of economists to study the facts for him.

If the government, under the guise of an international emergency which it is believed will last another decade anyway, is to set up a permanent system whereby wages are to be increased whenever the labor unions demand it but no price increases are to be permitted to compensate the producers, then the collapse of the major industries becomes a realistic threat.

Mr. Truman says he is not a candidate to succeed himself, but he wants to see a Democratic party victory. Hence Trumanism becomes the issue. The campaign debate may determine how far Trumanism has tended to coincide with state socialism in depriving those who save their money from receiving a fair return on their investments.

Inflation is slowly depreciating fixed investments. Trumanism is now about to impair the only hedge the investor has had—the opportunity of equity stocks to rise. But, with government seizure and with government dictation, there can be no hope of reasonable dividends.

There are more wage earners than stockholders, so on a political basis Trumanism holds to the false premise that it is politically sound to increase wages no matter what happens to the financial position of the companies.

The crash that will result from such a misguided policy will do the workers of America more harm than any wage increase can do them good. For if private enterprise is crucified, if incentive is impaired and if efficiency is retarded, the end result is government control and then operation of all major enterprises. This was the instinctive purpose of the New Deal and it is the obvious purpose of the so-called Fair Deal. The political crisis of 1952 will have a direct bearing on the economic crisis that is certain to come if Trumanism is to be the dominant philosophy of the nation in economics as well as in politics.

SHOKAN NEWS

Shokan, April 1—Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Simpkins of the Saugerties area attended Reformed Church services Sunday and had dinner with their friends, the Rev. Richard Coons and wife, at the parsonage.

Word has reached here of the death last week of Joseph Naughton, who with his family was formerly a regular summer visitor in Shokan for many years. Mr. Naughton, a retired lieutenant of metropolitan police, had many friends in this section. Q—What did various kinds of shoe decorations indicate to the early Greeks?

A—They showed the rank or wealth of the wearer. This was true among the Greeks, Romans, and the early Egyptians. High rank was shown by long, pointed toes and different kinds of decorations.

Q—Where do ducks get the oil that waterproofs their feathers?

A—All ducks keep their feathers well oiled by means of a large gland just above the tail. This gland gives off an oil which makes the duck's feathers waterproof. A duck will sink in water if the oil is removed from its feathers.

AID FROM INDUSTRY

Leaders in the transportation industries in Ohio have agreed to assist John Carroll University in a program designed to train students in practical as well as academic aspects of transportation. The University allows students to major in transportation as preparation for a degree in business administration. The Erie Railroad has donated three freight cars to the R.O.T.C. unit at John Carroll to help the cadets study the problem of loading and unloading military supplies.

The idea of integrating college study with experience in industry is a sound one. Many of the men and women who study in the universities and colleges will eventually seek careers in industry and a program designed to give them experience while they study is certain to be helpful.

Industry is beginning to realize its responsibility toward education. This realization is being expressed in scholarships and grants to deserving students. Assistance for colleges in practical programs is also an important contribution.

WOMEN IN DENIM

The man who goes to work in denim overalls will be dressed in style this year, at least as far as choice of fabric is concerned. Denim has always been considered a useful, durable material, but until recently it was generally reserved for work clothes. Now fashion authorities say that it will be one of the most popular fabrics for women's clothes during 1952. Smart evening dresses as well as sport clothes will be manufactured from denim.

Many men may deplore the path that fashion has taken. Denim has always been regarded as a rather masculine material, a sort of uniform that a man who got his hands dirty when he worked could wear with pride. Now that it will be fancied up a bit it may not be so popular with the working man. The debutante who trips off to an afternoon tea and the plumber who passes her with his lunch box may be clad in matching costumes. Who said this wasn't a classless country?

THE WILL ROGERS STORY

Fans of the late Will Rogers, actor and humorist, will be looking forward to the release of a picture based on his life. Rogers will be played by his son Will Rogers, Jr., an ex-congressman. Those who remember the lank figure of the father on stage with a patter of home-spun humor and an assortment of tricks with a lasso, may wonder whether the son's resemblance is more than physical.

Will Rogers for some time wrote a syndicated newspaper column which attracted wide readership. His wit was always gentle although he had a way of shattering the pretentious and deflating the pompous. When he was killed in an airplane crash in 1935 while flying with Wiley Post in Alaska he was mourned by millions who felt they knew him from his column, as well as from his stage and movie appearances. His name may yet produce a measure of box-office magic when his life story is released with his son in the starring role.

The first step to take to preserve something should be to deserve it.

NEGRO SCHOOLS

The South is recognizing its obligation to educate its Negro citizens satisfactorily. In the last 10 years, according to a survey made by the New York Times, the progress has been remarkable. In Florida in 1941-42 white teachers averaged $1,006 annual salary, Negro teachers $597. Now both get the same amount, estimated at $2,785.

During the present academic year Florida plans to spend $9,000,000 for white schools and $10,000,000 for Negro schools. The Alabama State Superintendent of Education reports that the salaries paid Negro teachers have increased five-fold since 1942. A like report comes from Arkansas.

Skeptics may say that Negro school facilities were so far behind the white that much more money could be spent in improving the Negro educational status and still leave it inferior. This is true in some localities; but it is also true that the South is making a strong effort to remedy old injustices.

"MY SON JOHN"

Some people go to the movies only for amusement; some like to learn in addition to being amused. I have been thinking about that recently, because I have seen more movies than usual. I think that I only go to movies for entertainment.

But what entertains one, may bore another. For instance, I have known men who swear that they never cry; yet, I have witnessed them sobbing at a picture—and enjoying it. I must admit that I could not restrain tears on both occasions when I saw "My Son John." The first time, I saw it with Fulton Oursler and his dear wife and my little daughter. The second time, I saw it with a party of devoted souls who fight Communism.

The management said that they hoped that we would not advertise this picture as a propaganda film; that we would speak of it as entertainment. I do not make such distinctions. If a film can hold my interest not once but twice, if it can move me so that I bring 50 friends to a preview, if it can grip adults and children alike, if its message reaches the heart—it is excellent theatre whatever it has to say.

Leo McCarey, who wrote and directed this picture, is a man who not only loves his country but has a whimsical sense of story. He catches life in motion and makes it not only meaningful but interesting.

"My Son John" is the simple story of an American family. It might be your family or mine. It might happen to boys or to girls anywhere in our land. It might be applied in a myriad of ways. And because it is so universal in our lives, this picture becomes a mirror in which each human being sees his own situation and wonders what he might have done so that tragedy had not come to his doorstep.

This is the story of a good family that produced a traitor. Good families have produced pickpockets and wayward girls, but traitors have been rare in American life. In the schoolbooks, we read of Benedict Arnold as a traitor, and of Nathan Hale as a hero. But until recent years, we never thought that anyone close to us, a son, a daughter, a brother, might be a traitor. Yet, Alger Hiss and half a dozen other Americans, people like us in most respects, have been convicted of acts involving treason.

And there are many who still do not believe that they were traitors because they cannot believe that any American would hate his country or do it harm. America is, after all, such a good country and we have such great benefits and privileges and advantages here.

So this is a tragedy that comes into the life of a fine American family, and were it written and directed by an ordinary person, it would probably have been merely interesting. Leo McCarey, however, is not an ordinary writer or director. He is a fervent, an exciting person who pours life into ideas. Richness of characterization is not unusual among modern directors, but an understanding of the mind, the thinking, the suffering of the soul of those who want to change and dare not—that only one who has himself suffered can understand.

The more sensitive the person, the greater are his doubts and fears. The character, John, obviously is tortured throughout by the conflict between ideas and the spirit and in the end returns to God.

It was interesting to see how an audience made up of fine minds reacted to this picture. No one could fail to live through the emotions of Helen Hayes, who played the mother. It was impossible not to watch every gesture of Robert Walker, who played John. Every supporting actor becomes a star in this picture.

Yet, this audience divided down the middle on the return to God. Those who had themselves been tortured by the compulsion to change their natures find in this picture high drama which forced one true man to say, "There but for the grace of God, am I."

Those who had shifted their positions in life without God's guidance, found it only another movie—just good entertainment. To me, it is an elevation of the art of the motion picture to the quality of the best in the theatre.

VITAMINS FOR THE ELDERLY

We do not hear or read as much about vitamins today as we did up to a year ago. It would seem that both patients and physicians are not as interested as they were. This is unfortunate because vitamins and also minerals—iron, phosphorous, calcium—are needed daily to maintain health and fitness.

Now that we have more old people in our midst than any other one group, physicians, and especially geriatricians whose specialty is the treatment of elderly people, are finding that not enough of certain vitamins are being eaten to maintain health.

In The Journal of the American Medical Association in the Question and Answer department, it is stated: "Medical science is becoming more and more concerned with diseases and disorders in relation to the age groups, industrial groups and population groups affected, rather than with specific diseases. More recently the science of gerontology (the treatment of the elderly) has come to the fore as one of the most important new fields of investigation from a medical, sociological and economic point of view."

Unfortunately many of us feel that as people become older they must expect changes in their physical, mental and emotional make-up and must simply learn to live with these changes and disorders. As a matter of fact, experimental studies by nutrition experts seem to point to the fact that an adequate intake of vitamins is necessary to health at all ages and will delay these changes and disorders we blame on old age.

Dr. W. H. Sebrell, in his book "Geriatric Medicine" points out that scaly dry skin is often due to lack of vitamin A and foods rich in this vitamin should be eaten for months till the skin becomes normal. Foods rich in vitamin A are fish liver oils, carrots, yellow squash, sweet potatoes, spinach and cabbage (kale).

Symptoms of vitamin B deficiency, particularly B1 and B complex, include constipation, muscle pains, poor appetite, nervousness, red tongue. Foods rich in vitamin B1 and B complex are lean beef, liver, beet greens, peas, dried prunes, wheat germ, spinach.

Lack of vitamin C may cause spongy, swollen or bleeding gums, bleeding under skin from slight injuries. Foods rich in vitamin C are oranges, lemons, grapefruit, raw cabbage, tomatoes and potatoes.

Lack of vitamin D in the elderly causes softening of the bones, early fatigue, pains in ribs and small of back, irregular teeth. No natural foods contain enough vitamin D for body needs. However, fish oils (cod and halibut), viosterol, or tablets of calcium gluconate or lactate should be taken daily if symptoms occur. Foods considered rich in vitamin D are butter, egg yolk, liver, irradiated foods (in which vitamin is not destroyed by ordinary cooking).

In Step

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

Washington—Friends of President Truman attribute the following reasons for his historic decision not to run again.

First, the wishes of Mrs. Truman; 2. His age—he would have been, if elected, the oldest President ever to take the oath of office; 3. The advice of party leaders, including Speaker Sam Rayburn and Chief Justice Fred Vinson; 4. The embarrassing setback given him by Senator Kefauver in New Hampshire; and finally, the prospect that he would have to run against his old friend, General Eisenhower.

For a long time the President has indicated to members of his family and to his closer friends that he did not want to run. More recently he intimated to one close intimate that the barrage of criticism was getting on his nerves and he wanted to get out.

"There are too many b-----s in this business," he aid.

Probably only three or four of his friends really knew how he felt, one of them being the chief justice, whom the President had urged to be the Democratic nominee himself.

At one time, approximately nine to twelve months ago, it was Mr. Truman's plan to appoint the chief justice to a key post in the administration such as secretary of state or defense mobilizer in order to give him a springboard to the presidency. This was to get around the fact that the chief justice has held a vigorous view that court should not be a springboard into politics and that no man should step from the court into an active candidacy for any office even the presidency.

This plan was sidetracked in part by Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin, though McCarthy to this day probably doesn't realize it. However, the constant barrage of criticism fired at Dean Acheson made it imperative in the mind of Mr. Truman, whose loyalty to his friends is legion, that Acheson be continued at the helm of the State Department.

Later, as time passed, the chief justice felt it was too late for him to step into another office as a springboard to the presidency. Not enough months remained before the campaign.

Taft Tempted Truman

It was at this point—approximately around December and January—that President Truman seriously reconsidered changing his mind about running. This period coincided with Senator Taft's reputed gains of delegates and when the Eisenhower backers were discouraged. At that time, it looked as if Taft would be the Republican nominee, and nothing has titillated Truman's political nostrils more than the idea of defeating his old critic and enemy, Bob Taft.

This itching on the President's part to take on Senator Taft was what caused some of his most revered political friends, including Speaker Rayburn and the chief justice, to urge him not to run. The chief justice and Speaker Rayburn discussed the matter privately and later the chief justice was selected as the man to present their joint view to the President.

This view was that Harry Truman would go down in history as a great president, if for nothing else, because of his courageous foreign policy. Historians, the chief justice is understood to have told the President, would overlook the petty political bickering and the corruption issue and would focus attention upon Truman's courage in saving Greece and Turkey from communism, in putting across the Marshall Plan and in conceiving the North Atlantic Pact for the defense of western Europe. It would also give him credit for his courageous stand on civil rights.

But if he ran again, Truman's friends believed, the Democratic Party would be torn asunder, first over the civil-rights issue, also in part over foreign policy.

The campaign would give the Republicans a chance to attack that foreign policy as was not done in the 1948 campaign when Senator Vandenberg was alive. Thus, it was pointed out, Truman's great milestones against communism might be plowed under.

This advice by Democrats of great standing in the party is reported to have offset the importuning of the palace guard that the President should run again. A few weeks thereafter came Eisenhower's show of strength in New Hampshire and the victory of Senator Kefauver which clinched Mr. Truman's decision.

Ike Was Feared

Of all these deterrent factors, perhaps the most important was the probability that Mr. Truman would have to run against Eisenhower.

Friends of the President who sat with him on the "back porch" of the White House in June 1948 recalled how worried he was over the prospect that Eisenhower would consent to have his name entered in the Democratic convention in Chicago. Truman made no secret of his belief that Ike could take the Democratic convention by storm, and he stewed mentally over some means of taking Eisenhower out of the race.

It was on this particular evening that George Allen was sent to New York to get a letter from the general guaranteeing that he would not run. Simultaneously another close friend of the President telephoned Milton Eisenhower, the general's brother, also to get an assurance that Ike was not a candidate.

Almost four years later, in the late summer of 1951, Truman again took confidential steps to make sure he would not face Eisenhower as a candidate. He remembered first a commitment he had made to Ike through their mutual friend, George Allen, in 1948—that if Ike wanted to run in '52, he, Truman would help him. He also doubtless remembered how formidable Ike would be as a candidate.

Therefore, the President invited George Allen for a cruise on the yacht Williamsburg in order to talk about their mutual friend in Paris.

Truman told Allen that he considered the North Atlantic Pact one of the most important cornerstones for world peace and that Eisenhower's leadership was essential to it. He added that he was worried over Republican statements that Eisenhower was available for the GOP nomination, and he felt that both the United States and our allies should know whether Ike was running the North Atlantic Pact or running for President.

Truman further suggested that two were not compatible, and that if Eisenhower really wanted to be President, he would be much more at home in the Democratic party than with the Republicans. Furthermore, the President indicated that, as a Democrat, Ike would not have to run openly, but could be "summoned" to the presidency. Truman even hinted that he might like to make the nominating speech himself.

Finally, the President suggested that George Allen fly to Paris and have a heart-to-heart talk with Eisenhower.

Allen countered by suggesting that Mr. Truman write a friendly note to Ike summarizing his views which he, Allen, would deliver in Paris.

This was done. Allen delivered the note and reported to the White House later: First, that Eisenhower would not quit the North Atlantic Pact in the near future; second, that the NATO job would be completed by this spring; third, that if he did run, he would talk to Truman first. And in conclusion, Ike sent word that in any event, he was a Republican.

If the government, under the guise of an international emergency which it is believed will last another decade anyway, is to set up a permanent system whereby wages are to be increased whenever the labor unions demand it but no price increases are to be permitted to compensate the producers, then the collapse of the major industries becomes a realistic threat.

Mr. Truman says he is not a candidate to succeed himself, but he wants to see a Democratic party victory. Hence Trumanism becomes the issue. The campaign debate may determine how far Trumanism has tended to coincide with state socialism in depriving those who save their money from receiving a fair return on their investments.

Inflation is slowly depreciating fixed investments. Trumanism is now about to impair the only hedge the investor has had—the opportunity of equity stocks to rise. But, with government seizure and with government dictation, there can be no hope of reasonable dividends.

There are more wage earners than stockholders, so on a political basis Trumanism holds to the false premise that it is politically sound to increase wages no matter what happens to the financial position of the companies.

The crash that will result from such a misguided policy will do the workers of America more harm than any wage increase can do them good. For if private enterprise is crucified, if incentive is impaired and if efficiency is retarded, the end result is government control and then operation of all major enterprises. This was the instinctive purpose of the New Deal and it is the obvious purpose of the so-called Fair Deal. The political crisis of 1952 will have a direct bearing on the economic crisis that is certain to come if Trumanism is to be the dominant philosophy of the nation in economics as well as in politics.

SHOKAN NEWS

Shokan, April 1—Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Simpkins of the Saugerties area attended Reformed Church services Sunday and had dinner with their friends, the Rev. Richard Coons and wife, at the parsonage.

Word has reached here of the death last week of Joseph Naughton, who with his family was formerly a regular summer visitor in Shokan for many years. Mr. Naughton, a retired lieutenant of metropolitan police, had many friends in this section. He is survived by his wife and three children, Donald and Walter Naughton and Dorothy (Mrs. Edward) Terhune, together with several grandchildren. Walter Naughton has a summer home along the Ridge road here.

The Delaware County Dairyman, published at Franklin by Jesse Palmater, has suspended publication after 97 years. The owner saw the old paper run in the red for seven years and kept it going in the hope of better times to come but though the circulation was fairly large, local merchants just "didn't get behind it" with their advertising And so, like MacArthur's old soldiers, the ancient sheet finally faded away.

Joseph Howell Dewitt, who will be having his 2nd birthday this Friday, is living with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dewitt on Post street in Kingston. Little Joe had quite a bad session with the croup during April. His dad is a War 2 veteran of service on the Austrian border and one of his ancestors was the Rev. J. H. Betts, pastor of the Shokan Dutch Church about a century ago.

The April meeting of the Shokan Ladies' Aid Society takes place this Wednesday at the home of Ann Ingalls.

Seemed as though everybody in Ulster county and the provinces beyond passed through the village Sunday, what with the weather for "riding out" being well nigh perfect. Stellar attraction of course was the great Ashokan, magnificent in its mountain setting and plumb filled to the normal flowline.

The Cairo Central school board has received more than a score of applications for the job of principal to succeed Evan Pritchard, resigned.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Beesmer and children were numbered among Kingstonians calling in the village Sunday. Burton, a member of N. Y. City's uniformed police force in the reservoir country, comes of old South Olive stock, being a grandson of George Beesmer who was brought up in the Samsonville sector and a great-grandson of Betsy Beesmer, who lived in the old village of Shokan when well along in her eighties.

Q—Where do ducks get the oil that waterproofs their feathers?

A—All ducks keep their feathers well oiled by means of a large gland just above the tail. This gland gives off an oil which makes the duck's feathers waterproof. A duck will sink in water if the oil is removed from its feathers.

Midwest States Battle Floods

(By The Associated Press)

Residents in five midwest states battled flood waters today as rivers and streams overflowed from spring thaws.

Cooler weather hit the flooded areas of the Dakotas, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Iowa today. Temperatures, however, generally were above freezing.

Flood waters from the Missouri river forced 60 families from their homes west of Williston, N. D., while more than 200 homes were affected by the overflow of the swollen Little Missouri river in Marmarth, N. D. Floods were expected along other rivers in North Dakota.

The Missouri also was overflowing at Fort Pierre, S. D., covering about 10 residential blocks. The Bad river, south of Fort Pierre, also was over its banks, with water five feet deep around 10 or 15 homes.

Extensive Damage Caused

The Root, Redwood and Minnesota rivers caused extensive damage in Minnesota, while several families were forced from their homes in the Springdale section of Sioux City, Ia., by the flooding Floyd river. The Oconto river spilled over its banks in Oconto, Wis.

Cooler weather was reported today from the Appalachians westward through most of the Great Lakes region and the Ohio valley. It was below freezing in most of the Northern Plains states. But higher readings were reported from the Pacific northwest.

Strong winds swept across the upper Mississippi valley and upper Great Lakes region. Snow flurries hit the Lake Superior region.

Rain fell in most of New England, with showers southward along the Atlantic coast to the south Atlantic states. Rain also hit the coastal sections of the Pacific northwest and northwestern California.

The first steam engines were developed to pump water from mines.

Good Farm Year Predicted in Area

This year shows fair promise of being a good year for farmers, William H. Palmer, Ulster county agricultural agent, said at a meeting here Tuesday noon.

Stressing that costs, as well as gross income, are believed to be still rising, Palmer emphasized that efficiency is a necessity on farms today. Full employment, and the fact that building construction and automobile production seems to have reached their peaks indicate there will be more consumer dollars available for farm produce, the agricultural agent said. He also explained, however, that there are many variable factors which can affect farm income as the season progresses.

3,000 in County

Speaking of the economic importance of farming in Ulster county, Palmer revealed that there are between 2,000 and 3,000 farms in the county, of which approximately 1,600 are classified as commercial farms, or farms from which the operator receives a major portion of his income.

Ulster county ranks first in fresh sweet corn production, second in fruit, and "jockeys between first and second place" with Sullivan county in egg production of all the counties of the state, Palmer said.

Within the county, dairy, poultry and fruit production account in that order for most of the farm income, he revealed. About 500 farmers in each of those classifications receive more than half of their income from one of those three industries.

This listing represents a change since 1945, when fruit production was by far the leading farm industry in the county and the income from that industry was about double that of the other two major farm industries, he said.

State Police Think Valley Fires Linked

Hudson, N. Y., April 2 (AP)—State police suspect a fire which destroyed a large dairy barn southeast of here yesterday may have some connection with a series of recent blazes in the Harlem valley.

There was no official estimate of loss from yesterday's fire. It destroyed a barn on the farm of Clinton Bainer, 22 miles from here.

Bainer's farm is two miles from the scene last Thursday of a fire which did $25,000 damage to a barn on Fred Barton's dairy farm.

About 20 miles away in the same area, at Amenia, N. Y., a series of fires 12 days ago in a 30-hour period did $270,000 damage to three farm buildings and a house.

The cause of the fires has not been explained. State police and sheriffs of Columbia and Dutchess counties are investigating.

A Kansas farmer was observed by his wife to be unusually pensive.

She — A penny for your thoughts!

He—I was thinking, my dear, what epitaph I should put on your tombstone.

As his spouse was in perfect health she resented this undue thoughfulness.

She—Oh, that's very simple. Just put "Wife of the Above."

Husband—My wife gives me continental cooking. The soup tastes like the bottom of the English Channel.

Bobbie—Oh, mother, a truck went by as big as a house!

Mother—Bobbie, why do you exaggerate so terribly? I've told you 20 million times about that habit of yours, and it doesn't do a bit of good!

Her car stalled at the corner and the traffic light changed red, yellow, green, red, yellow, green, etc. Finally the officer stepped up beside the car and asked "What's the matter, lady, ain't we got any colors you like?"

A captain in the navy, meeting a friend as he landed at Portsmouth, boasted that he had left his whole ship's company the happiest fellows in the world. "How so?" asked his friend. Suitor—Er—I—er—am seeking your daughter's hand—er—have you any objection, sir?

Father—None at all. Take the one that's always in my pocket.

Judge—And what did you do when you heard the accused using such awful language?

Policeman—I told him he wasn't fit to be among decent people, and brought him here.

A Kansas farmer was observed by his wife to be unusually pensive.

She — A penny for your thoughts!

He—I was thinking, my dear, what epitaph I should put on your tombstone.

As his spouse was in perfect health she resented this undue thoughfulness.

She—Oh, that's very simple. Just put "Wife of the Above."

Husband—My wife gives me continental cooking. The soup tastes like the bottom of the English Channel.

Bobbie—Oh, mother, a truck went by as big as a house!

Mother—Bobbie, why do you exaggerate so terribly? I've told you 20 million times about that habit of yours, and it doesn't do a bit of good!

Her car stalled at the corner and the traffic light changed red, yellow, green, red, yellow, green, etc. Finally the officer stepped up beside the car and asked "What's the matter, lady, ain't we got any colors you like?"

A captain in the navy, meeting a friend as he landed at Portsmouth, boasted that he had left his whole ship's company the happiest fellows in the world. "How so?" asked his friend. "Why, I have just, flogged seventeen, and they are happy it is over; and all the rest are happy that they have escaped."

Suitor—Er—I—er—am seeking your daughter's hand—er—have you any objection, sir?

Father—None at all. Take the one that's always in my pocket.

Judge—And what did you do when you heard the accused using such awful language?

Policeman—I told him he wasn't fit to be among decent people, and brought him here.

Jack—You'll never make a good deep sea fisherman.

Carl—Why not?

Jack—Because you're too shallow minded.

Lyon Says Taxes Gobbled Profits Of Banking Firms

New York, April 2 (AP) — New York state's bank superintendent terms 1951 "a year of strong expansion and growth," but contends that tax boosts rubbed out "nearly all" of the higher operating earnings made by banking firms.

William A. Lyon said in a year-end report yesterday on state-chartered institutions that "increases were marked" last year "in deposits, in loans, in operating earnings and also in taxes."

"As a result," he continued, "nearly all of what the year brought to banking with one hand, in the way of higher net operating revenues, it took away with the other by raising the tax burden." Lyon added:

"These heavier taxes are being imposed on a business whose ability to earn already suffers by comparison with many other lines of activity."

Jump 39 Millions

Lyon reported that net operating earnings of state banks in 1951 jumped 39 million dollars—or 26 per cent—to 204 million.

However, the superintendent said, net profits were held to 108 million, an increase of 5 million or 4 per cent over 1950.

"This reflected mainly the weight of income taxes, which were 22½ million or 40 per cent greater," Lyon stated.

Lyon gave these other statistics:

1 — A "continued strong demand" for commercial and industrial loans raised the total almost 1 billion dollars, to $5,400,000,000 by Dec. 31, 1951.

2 — Consumer installment loans dropped 18 million dollars to 375 million. This was attributed to official credit restraints and self-imposed restraints on buying.

3 — Real estate loans, at 933 million, closed the year 91 million dollars higher than a year previous.

4 — Total bank assets at the end of 1951 were $22,900,000,000, up $1,300,000,000.

5 — Total deposits climbed $1,200,000,000 to $20,600,000,000.

Proclamation

Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk today proclaimed the month of April as Ulster County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals month and urged the residents of Kingston "to lend their support to this society's worthwhile purposes and the cause of unfortunate animals."

Full text of the proclamation:

Whereas, the Ulster County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was organized in the year 1891, and

Whereas, the said Society was reactivated in the year 1950, and

Whereas, said Society was organized for the purpose of providing effective means for the prevention of cruelty to animals throughout the County of Ulster; to enforce all laws which are now, or may hereafter be, enacted for the protection of animals; and, to secure by lawful means the arrest, conviction and punishment of all persons violating said laws, and

Whereas, through the generosity of an animal lover, the Society within the past year has obtained an animal ambulance and equipment which is now being used by said Society to alleviate the suffering of unfortunate animals, and

Whereas, through the generosity of another animal lover the Society within the past year has procured a suitable site upon which to erect an animal shelter, and

Whereas, it is necessary to obtain financial assistance for the erection of said shelter and to carry on the valuable work of said Society and said ambulance, and

Whereas, the Directors of said Society have selected the month of April, 1952 to advance the cause of animals and obtain funds for such purposes,

Now, therefore, I, Oscar V. Newkirk, Mayor of the City of Kingston, do ordain and proclaim the month of April, 1952 as Ulster County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals month and urge the residents of the City of Kingston to lend their support to this Society's worthwhile purposes and the cause of unfortunate animals.

OSCAR V. NEWKIRK,
Mayor.

But They Took Him

Providence, R. I., April 2 (AP)—Thieves broke into the Gateway Diner here 22 times in seven years. On the 22nd time last January, owner Edward K. Harris of Seekonk, Mass., bought a Collie-German Shepherd and let him sleep in the diner nights as a guard. Thieves broke into the diner for the 23rd time last night. All they took was the dog.

It is believed that the first printing was done by the Chinese.

Must Pass Examination

Albany, N. Y., April 2 (AP)—Legislation was signed today by Governor Dewey requiring all persons under 21 to pass an examination in the handling of firearms before being issued a New York state hunting license. The old law called for such tests for all applicants under 17. The bill, effective July 1, is designed to help cut down accidental shootings, which were blamed for most of the state's 141 hunting accidents last fall. Seventeen persons died in 1951 as a result of such mishaps. The new law covers initial applications for hunting licenses and all persons under 21 who obtained a license under the old 17-year-old provision. The gun-handling examination must be made by an agent of the State Conservation Department.

Estate Is Appraised

New York, April 2 (AP)—Stage actress Betty Compton, once the wife of the late Mayor James J. Walker, left a net estate of $93,691 when she died in 1944 an estate tax appraisal showed today. Gross assets totalled $150,132, including old Westbury real estate valued at $59,500, insurance of $55,488 and miscellaneous items of $16,380. The late Theodore T. Knappen, her husband at the time of her death, was named in the will as residuary legatee. Their son, Theodore C. Knappen, was listed as beneficiary under a trust agreement. Mrs. Knappen bequeathed certain furnishings in a Manhattan apartment to Walker, who died in 1946. Their two adopted children, Mary Ann Walker and James J. Walker, were named beneficiaries in two annuity policies.

Juliana to Have Full Coverage by Press and Radio

The visit of Queen Juliana Saturday will have full press, radio, television and newsreel coverage, it was announced yesterday by the 300th Anniversary, Inc.

Fourteen correspondents accredited by European newspapers and four photographers and writers from Life Magazine will be among those in the cavalcade which departs from Stewart Field Saturday morning. International News Photo Service is setting up special wirephoto machinery in a local studio for immediate transmission of pictures of the Queen's visit. Telenews will cover it for television and will make the official documentary for the State Department. Radio station WKNY in Kingston and WGY in Schenectady will provide radio coverage. The program will also be transcribed for another radio network.

The State Department is sending four 1952 Cadillac limousines, from a New York car rental service, to Stewart Field to transport the Royal party to Kingston and back to Hyde Park. Responsibility for the cavalcade until it reaches the Kingston city limits rests with State Troopers. They will also accompany the royal couple back to Hyde Park.

Riding in the first limousine will be the Queen, Jan H. van Roijen, Dutch ambassador to the United States, and John S. Simmons, chief of protocol of the U. S. State Department.

In the second car will be Jan A. de Vos van Speen Wijk, Dutch consul general in New York, Mrs. van Roijen, Jonkvrouwe C.E.B. Roell and Rear Admiral Emmet P. Forrestel, USN, American aide to the royal couple.

In the third car will be Baroness de Vos van Speen Wijk, Lt. Cdr. J. G. Stegeman of the Dutch Navy, aid-de-camp to Queen Juliana. The balance of the passengers in the third and fourth cars will be security agents of the State Department.

"We don't know whether Mrs. Roosevelt will join the cavalcade at Stewart Field or in Kingston," Harry Rigby, publicity chairman for the 300th Anniversary Committee, told The Freeman. "She will be a part of the royal party, however."

Rigby said that every city policeman would be on duty Saturday, as well as uniformed deputies of the sheriff's office. A battalion of National Guardsmen, the 156th Field Artillery, will also participate in the celebration.

he said, were due to bad road conditions at Wilbur avenue and South Wall street.

Mrs. Sylvia Gundberg, of Kerhonkson, informed the council that she suffered injuries in a fall on North Front street last March 6, but mentioned no amount of claim. She said the police have a report of the mishap.

Lease Is Authorized

The aldermen voted to authorize the leasing of lands on East Union street through public auction for the growing of mushrooms. The city-owned lands containing caves, are not now in use for any other purpose, and they are suitable for mushroom growing, a communication said.

An amendment to the electrical code, which allows electricians installing heating units, the protection of the code, was adopted following a favorable report of the laws and rules committee.

Recommendations of the traffic control committee for traffic regulations at the George Washington school were referred to the mayor, police chief and education board.

They asked for a police woman at Washington avenue and Marius street, that a check be made on warning signs on Wall street and Washington avenue as to size and visibility, that a check be made on cars passing school buses, that the police check parking areas for picking up children on Washington avenue and Wall street, and that the children be allowed to use the front entrance on Wall street opposite Henry street.

Loading Zone Authorized

A 40-foot loading zone in front of Thomson's Colonial Laundry was authorized, and an application of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tongue, of 9 Orchard street, for a zoning change affecting a property near them, was referred to the laws and rules committee. The land, now in a residential section, would be used for the storage of cars, the application said.

The alderman granted Assessor Winfield Swart permission to attend a training school for assessors in Albany April 23, 24 and 25.

Letters from Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk announcing three recent appointments were read and filed. They were: Sylvester F. Demskie, 26 Brewster street, as ninth ward supervisor to replace the late Charles J. Streets' Repairs Asked

Alderman Wenzel, fourth ward, asked repair of First avenue from Delaware avenue to Moore street; Second avenue from Delaware to High street; Ulster street from Third avenue to Fourth avenue, and Fourth avenue to Kingston street. He also asked that stop signs be placed at First avenue and Moore street and at Larch street and Second avenue.

Alderman Schechter, sixth ward, asked that the spring which runs into Chamber street, opposite School No. 3 be capped or its water diverted into the sewer, because parents had complained that children were drinking the water and in winter it was an ice hazard.

Alderman-at-large Joseph Kelly was unable to attend the session because of illness and the councilmen voted Alderman Abram D. Relyea, 11th ward, as president of the council for the meeting.

Coroner Finds Mt. Tremper Man Died by Drowning

A coroner's verdict of "accidental death by drowning" has been returned in the death of 82-year-old William Herberholtz of Mt. Tremper whose body was found about noon Tuesday in Beaverkill creek near his home.

During the morning Herberholtz has been tending a grass fire on his Mt. Tremper property. Shortly before noon neighbors observed the fire gaining headway but did not see the aged man. They notified his son-in-law, employed in Chichester, who, assisted by neighbors, conducted a search.

Sgt. Arthur A. Reilly of Lake Katrine State Police who with Cpl. Ray Dunn and Coroner Michael A. Galietta conducted an investigation, said the body was lodged against rocks and apparently had been carried downstream "quite a distance."

Herberholtz is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Norman Segar of Mt. Tremper, and one son, Ernest, now in Australia. Funeral services will be held at 1 p. m. Friday from the Gormley Funeral Home in Phoenicia and the body will be placed in the Wiltwyck Receiving Vault in Kingston. Later, when his son arrives from Australia, the body will be shipped to Germany for burial.

Albany Democrats Hail O'Brien Win

Albany, N. Y., April 2 (AP)—Democrats today pictured the smashing special election triumph of Leo W. O'Brien as representative from the 32nd congressional district as a "clear-cut victory for Truman."

The unofficial count in yesterday's election gave O'Brien, 51-year-old Albany Times-Union legislative correspondent, 66,883 votes to 27,294 for Republican John F. Forner, Jr. The Democratic candidate polled 4,094 of his votes on the Liberal party line.

Scott Gray, American Labor party, got 282 votes.

O'Brien won 70 per cent of the total vote, an unprecedented plurality for the heavily Democratic district, which comprises Albany county and part of Troy, Rensselaer county.

O'Connell Statement

Daniel P. O'Connell, Albany county Democratic leader, declared "this is positively a clear-cut Truman victory. We waged our campaign on Truman and this is the answer."

O'Brien said "this was a tremendous victory for the Democratic party and I am glad that the campaign was waged on national issues."

Forner had attacked the national administration as corrupt and inefficient.

The election was held to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Democrat Rep. William T. Byrne.

Pine Hill Man Fined for Cruelty To Work Horses

Donald Osterhoudt, 23, of Pine Hill was fined $10 yesterday by a Phoenicia justice of the peace for cruelty to animals, the second case of its kind in Ulster county in the last two weeks.

The arrest followed an investigation by Cpl. Ray Dunn of the State Troopers and Chief Agent Ray Winne of the Ulster County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Dunn said he and Winne acted on a report that young Osterhoudt was "over-driving and beating his horse while skidding logs off the mountain." The process of "skidding" a log, he explained is to hook the log and drag it by a section of chain secured to the harness of the horse.

Dunn and Winne waited until Osterhoudt came down, observing that he had "a large whip about one inch in diameter at the butt." He was hauling six logs with one horse, Dunn said, pointing out that one of the logs was a large one and the rest small, but that the load was too much for a single horse to pull. Dunn and Winne said they saw the logs become stuck in soft mud behind some rocks and observed Osterhoudt whipping the horse.

"We hollered at him and he saw us at the bottom of the hill," Dunn said. "He cut four logs loose and threw his whip away."

Winne said that there were two horses, one being used to "skid" the logs, the other tethered on top of the hill, each of them with bad harness sores on their breasts and hind legs. One of the horses, he said, had sores on each breast "as big as a saucer." One of them had split hoofs and cut a piece out of his knee "as big as a baseball," Winne declared. He said that the haul from the top of the mountain to the foot was about four miles.

Winne said that two years ago he and Dunn had condemned two other horses, owned by Stanley Osterhoudt, father of Donald, and that they were destroyed. He warned also that several other complaints in Ulster county were under investigation.

Judge Smith suspended the fine on condition that young Osterhoudt call a veterinarian and not use the horses again until the harness sores were healed and the doctor certified the horses were in condition to be used.

On March 28 Henry Adam Glelch, 28, of RD 1, West Hurley, was fined $10 for failing to provide sustenance for his three horses. In addition, Justice of the Peace Roger Loughran, who sat for more than a half hours on the trial in the Hurley town hall, imposed a 10-day jail sentence which was suspended.

Kingston Has Full

assures that the sewer will be adequate and that money will not be needlessly spent by over design.

During this period the long-term record has been used by the U. S. Corps of Engineers in their flood-control design in the Esopus valley; by Dr. Howell in New York city's cloud seeding operation and by the U. S. Weather Bureau for the last 15 years.

Gauge Is Worn Out

After 19 years of continuous service the original Ferguson gauge wore out and had to be replaced. Upon discussion with the U. S. Dept. of Commerce, citing the value of the long term Kingston record and the necessity of keeping the record continuous, the U. S. Weather Bureau established the department of engineering station as an official station of the U. S. Weather Bureau and replaced the Ferguson gauge with a new Bendix-Friez gauge at no cost to the city.

During the years other weather instruments have been installed, such as the Taylor Recording Thermometer which automatically records the temperature continuously day and night on a chart operated by a clock movement leaving a permanent and continuous record.

Pressures Are Recorded

Atmospheric pressures are recorded continuously on a clock operated chart by a pen which is connected to the aneroid mechanism by a sensitive multiplying system graphically tracing a sharp record of every barometric variation as the clock turns the chart.

By means of this instrument the elevation above sea level may be obtained as well as recording the barometric trend or the fall or rise of the barometer aside from the normal diurnal variation. These significant pressure changes occur about twelve hours before the actual change in weather arrives so that reasonably accurate predictions can be made of weather 12 to 20 hours in advance.

A new Hygrograph U. S. Weather Bureau type has been installed and records the relative humidity. In this instrument the humidity sensitive element is a cord of hygroscopic human hairs, which will shrink in the absence of moisture activating a system of levers attached to a recording pen. The pen graphically traces the relative humidity on a clock-operated time chart giving a continuous and permanent record.

The relative humidity is also obtained manually by the use of a sling psychrometer, made up of a wet bulb and a dry bulb thermometer, which registers the depression or difference in temperature of the air and the water vapor in the air. From this figure the percentage of relative humidity is calculated.

Has Windial

To complete the weather instrument at the station is a Bendix-Friez Windial, which is an electrically operated system for measuring the speed and indicating the direction of the wind. It consists of a transmitter located on the City Hall roof, which is connected by cable to a remote panel indicator in the city engineer's office.

The transmitter is similar in shape and appearance to a miniature airplane, the propellor of which is revolved by the wind and in a manner similar to an automobile speedometer transmits a speed impulse to eight electric cables which register the speed of the wind in miles per hour on the remote recording dial. A similar telemetering system in the throat of the transmitter indicates the direction of the wind as the transmitter turns on its standard and registers on the remote dial similar to many aircraft instruments.

Good for Various Purposes

Aside from its value as a weather instrument, the data provided by the winddial is basic in the preparation of a wind rose for airports or landing fields and for city planning purposes.

The records of this station, while primarily of importance to the department of engineering for design purposes, have come to be widely used by other public and semi-public agencies, as well as by the courts in negligence or indemnity cases in which weather is involved. They are used by the public to establish weather facts in insurance matters and by local newspapers and the radio station. It is expected that these instruments will give a more timely and accurate local weather prediction than the more distant stations to assist the Board of Public Works in their work pertaining to storms.

day in a 10-minute fight between 33 Sabres and about 30 MIGs over North Korea just before dusk.

The damage claims came out of a brief encounter in the morning.

Sabre pilots traded shots with MIG fliers at other times during the day but the MIGs dodged back into their Manchurian sanctuary rather than fight.

On the ground, a U. S. Eighth Army briefing officer reported only two Communist probes and scattered patrol skirmishes along the Korea battlefront Wednesday morning.

Counter-attacking allied troops Tuesday night and early Wednesday hurled back about 1,500 Chinese Reds who hit United Nations lines on the western front four miles from the Panmunjom truce tents.

John and Crown To Be Rebuilt

Work is scheduled to start April 15 on the reconstruction of John and Crown streets, Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk said today.

Other important street work including the repair of those now used to detour away from the Broadway crossing project are on schedule for repair, but work will not start on them until the Broadway underpass is completed, he said.

Wilbur avenue, Smith and Ten-Broeck avenues and Grand street, are on schedule for the earliest possible date after completion of the Broadway project, and Fair street from Main to Henry street will be reconstructed, the mayor said.

Work is to be started early on John and Crown streets so that they will be completed before the summer rush of traffic.

guards in Kings county court. He did not comment during a 15-minute castigation delivered by the judge.

Sutton and his henchman, Thomas (Scup) Kling, 45, were convicted yesterday by a Queens county jury of a $64,000 holdup of the Sunnyside branch of the Manufacturers Trust Company in Queens in 1950. They each face up to 30 years or more on this verdict. They will be sentenced later.

Kling Awaits Trial

Meanwhile, Kling was brought to Manhattan from Queens this morning to await trial on a charge of illegal possession of a gun. Like Sutton, the gun was found in his possession when he was arrested last February.

His attorney obtained an adjournment of the hearing until Friday. Because of his criminal record he may get a mandatory life sentence just like Sutton with whom he escaped from prison back in 1947.

Judge Goldstein reviewed Sutton's long criminal record going back to 1919 and commented on the bank robbery on which Sutton was acquitted.

Goldstein said Sutton had committed 37 robberies that he knew of and declared that although some good could be found in many criminals "there isn't a single left in him (Sutton) that is worth a damn."

"Take him out and get rid of him," Goldstein concluded waving Sutton and his guards away.

Coroner Finds Mt. Tremper Man Died by Drowning

A coroner's verdict of "accidental death by drowning" has been returned in the death of 82-year-old William Herberholtz of Mt. Tremper whose body was found about noon Tuesday in Beaverkill creek near his home.

During the morning Herberholtz was seen tending a grass fire on his Mt. Tremper property. Shortly before noon neighbors observed the fire gaining headway but did not see the aged man. They notified his son-in-law, employed in Chichester, who, assisted by neighbors, conducted a search.

Sgt. Arthur A. Reilly of Lake Katrine State Police who with Cpl. Ray Dunn and Coroner Michael A. Galietta conducted an investigation, said the body was lodged against rocks and apparently had been carried downstream "quite a distance."

Herberholtz is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Norman Segar of Mt. Tremper, and one son, Ernest, now in Australia. Funeral services will be held at 1 p. m. Friday from the Gormley Funeral Home in Phoenicia and the body will be placed in the Wiltwyck Receiving Vault in Kingston. Later, when his son arrives from Australia, the body will be shipped to Germany for burial.

Albany Democrats Hail O'Brien Win

Albany, N. Y., April 2 (AP) — Democrats today pictured the smashing special election triumph of Leo W. O'Brien as representative from the 32nd congressional district as a "clear-cut victory for Truman."

The unofficial count in yesterday's election gave O'Brien, 51-year-old Albany Times-Union legislative correspondent, 66,883 votes to 27,294 for Republican John F. Forner, Jr. The Democratic candidate polled 4,094 of his votes on the Liberal party line.

Scott Gray, American Labor party, got 282 votes.

O'Brien won 70 per cent of the total vote, an unprecedented plurality for the heavily Democratic district, which comprises Albany county and part of Troy, Rensselaer county.

O'Connell Statement

Daniel P. O'Connell, Albany county Democratic leader, declared "this is positively a clear-cut Truman victory. We waged our campaign on Truman and this is the answer."

O'Brien said "this was a tremendous victory for the Democratic party and I am glad that the campaign was waged on national issues."

Forner had attacked the national administration as corrupt and inefficient.

The election was held to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Democrat Rep. William T. Byrne.

$75,000 Injury

he said, were due to bad road conditions at Wilbur avenue and South Wall street.

Mrs. Sylvia Gundberg, of Kerhonkson, informed the council that she suffered injuries in a fall on North Front street last March 6, but mentioned no amount of claim. She said the police have a report of the mishap.

Lease Is Authorized

The aldermen voted to authorize the leasing of lands on East Union street through public auction for the growing of mushrooms. The city-owned lands containing caves, are not now in use for any other purpose, and they are suitable for mushroom growing, a communication said.

An amendment to the electrical code, which allows electricians installing heating units, the protection of the code, was adopted following a favorable report of the laws and rules committee.

Recommendations of the traffic control committee for traffic regulations at the George Washington school were referred to the mayor, police chief and education board.

They asked for a police woman at Washington avenue and Marius street, that a check be made on warning signs on Wall street and Washington avenue as to size and visibility, that a check be made on cars passing school buses, that the police check parking areas for picking up children on Washington avenue and Wall street, and that the children be allowed to use the front entrance on Wall street opposite Henry street.

Loading Zone Authorized

A 40-foot loading zone in front of Thomson's Colonial Laundry was authorized, and an application of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tongue, of 9 Orchard street, for a zoning change affecting a property near them, was referred to the laws and rules committee. The land, now in a residential section, would be used for the storage of cars, the application said.

The alderman granted Assessor Winfield Swart permission to attend a training school for assessors in Albany April 23, 24 and 25.

Letters from Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk announcing three recent appointments were read and filed. They were: Sylvester F. Demskie, 26 Brewster street, as ninth ward supervisor to replace the late Charles J. Messinger; Richard Heffernan, 74 Abruyn street, city hall janitor replacing the late Melvin Wolff, and Martin Mooney, 241 East Chester street, as acting senior clerk in the city treasurer's office.

A resolution by Alderman Parmelee, 13th ward, asked that the BPW be requested to give Wilbur avenue top priority in its construction program when the crossing project is completed.

Streets' Repairs Asked

Alderman Wenzel, fourth ward, asked repair of First avenue from Delaware avenue to Moore street; Second avenue from Delaware to High street; Ulster street from Third avenue to Fourth avenue, and Fourth avenue to Kingston street. He also asked that stop signs be placed at First avenue and Moore street and at Larch street and Second avenue.

Alderman Schechter, sixth ward, asked that the spring which runs into Chamber street, opposite School No. 3 be capped or its water diverted into the sewer, because parents had complained that children were drinking the water and in winter it was an ice hazard.

Alderman-at-large Joseph Kelly was unable to attend the session because of illness and the councilmen voted Alderman Abram D. Relyea, 11th ward, as president of the council for the meeting.

Pine Hill Man Fined for Cruelty To Work Horses

Donald Osterhoudt, 23, of Pine Hill was fined $10 yesterday by a Phoenicia justice of the peace for cruelty to animals, the second case of its kind in Ulster county in the last two weeks.

The arrest followed an investigation by Cpl. Ray Dunn of the State Troopers and Chief Agent Ray Winne of the Ulster County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Dunn said he and Winne acted on a report that young Osterhoudt was "over-driving and beating his horse while skidding logs off the mountain." The process of "skidding" a log, he explained is to hook the log and drag it by a section of chain secured to the harness of the horse.

Dunn and Winne waited until Osterhoudt came down, observing that he had "a large whip about one inch in diameter at the butt." He was hauling six logs with one horse, Dunn said, pointing out that one of the logs was a large one and the rest small, but that the load was too much for a single horse to pull. Dunn and Winne said they saw the logs become stuck in soft mud behind some rocks and observed Osterhoudt whipping the horse.

"We hollered at him and he saw us at the bottom of the hill," Dunn said. "He cut four logs loose and threw his whip away."

Winne said that there were two horses, one being used to "skid" the logs, the other tethered on top of the hill, each of them with bad harness sores on their breasts and hind legs. One of the horses, he said, had sores on each breast "as big as a saucer." One of them had fallen and cut a piece out of his knee "as big as a baseball," Winne declared. He said that the haul from the top of the mountain to the foot was about four miles.

Winne said that two years ago he and Dunn had condemned two other horses, owned by Stanley Osterhoudt, father of Donald, and that they were destroyed. He warned also that several other complaints in Ulster county were under investigation.

Judge Smith suspended the fine on condition that young Osterhoudt call a veterinarian and not use the horses again until the harness sores were healed and the doctor certified the horses were in condition to be used.

On March 28 Henry Adam Gleich, 28, of RD 1, West Hurley, was fined $10 for failing to provide sustenance for his three horses. In addition, Justice of the Peace Roger Loughran, who sat for three and a half hours on the trial in the Hurley town hall, imposed a 10-day jail sentence which was suspended.

Kingston Has Full

assures that the sewer will be adequate and that money will not be needlessly spent by over design.

During this period the long-term record has been used by the U. S. Corps of Engineers in their flood-control design in the Esopus valley; by Dr. Howell in New York city's cloud seeding operation and by the U. S. Weather Bureau for the last 15 years.

Gauge Is Worn Out

After 19 years of continuous service the original Ferguson gauge wore out and had to be replaced. Upon discussion with the U. S. Dept. of Commerce, citing the value of the long term Kingston record and the necessity of keeping the record continuous, the U. S. Weather Bureau established the department of engineering station as an official station of the U. S. Weather Bureau and replaced the Ferguson gauge with a new Bendix-Friez gauge at no cost to the city.

During the years other weather instruments have been installed, such as the Taylor Recording Thermometer which automatically records the temperature continuously day and night on a chart operated by a clock movement leaving a permanent and continuous record.

Pressures Are Recorded

Atmospheric pressures are recorded continuously on a clock operated chart by a pen which is connected to the aneroid mechanism by a sensitive, multipying system graphically tracing a sharp record of every barometric variation as the clock turns the chart.

By means of this instrument the elevation above sea level may be obtained as well as recording the barometric trend or the fall or rise of the barometer aside from the normal diurnal variation. These significant pressure changes occur about twelve hours before the actual change in weather arrives so that reasonably accurate predictions can be made of weather 12 to 20 hours in advance.

A new Hygrograph U. S. Weather Bureau type has been installed and records the relative humidity. In this instrument the humidity sensitive element is a cord of hygroscopic human hairs, which will shrink in the absence of moisture activating a system of levers attached to a recording pen. The pen graphically traces the relative humidity on a clock-operated time chart giving a continuous and permanent record.

The relative humidity is also obtained manually by the use of a sling psychrometer, made up of a wet bulb and a dry bulb thermometer, which registers the depression or difference in temperature of the air and the water vapor in the air. From this figure the percentage of relative humidity is calculated.

Has Windial

To complete the weather instrument at the station is a Bendix-Friez Windial, which is an electrically operated system for measuring the speed and indicating the direction of the wind. It consists of a transmitter located on the City Hall roof, which is connected by cable to a remote panel indicator in the city engineer's office.

The transmitter is similar in shape and appearance to a miniature airplane, the propellor of which is revolved by the wind and in a manner similar to an automobile speedometer transmits a speed impulse to eight electric cables which register the speed of the wind in miles per hour on the remote recording dial. A similar telemetering system in the throat of the transmitter indicates the direction of the wind as the transmitter turns on its standard and registers on the remote dial similar to many aircraft instruments.

Good for Various Purposes

Aside from its value as a weather instrument, the data provided by the winddial is basic in the preparation of a wind rose for airports or landing fields and for city planning purposes.

The records of this station, while primarily of importance to the department of engineering for design purposes, have come to be widely used by other public and semi-public agencies, as well as by the courts in negligence or indemnity cases in which weather is involved. They are used by the public to establish weather facts in insurance matters and by local newspapers and the radio station. It is expected that these instruments will give a more timely and accurate local weather prediction than the more distant stations to assist the Board of Public Works in their work pertaining to storms.

The damage claims came out of a brief encounter in the morning.

Sabre pilots traded shots with MIG fliers at other times during the day but the MIGs dodged back into their Manchurian sanctuary rather than fight.

On the ground, a U. S. Eighth Army briefing officer reported only two Communist probes and scattered patrol skirmishes along the Korea battlefront Wednesday morning.

Counter-attacking allied troops Tuesday night and early Wednesday hurled back about 1,500 Chinese Reds who hit United Nations lines on the western front four miles from the Panmunjom truce tents.

John and Crown To Be Rebuilt

Work is scheduled to start April 15 on the reconstruction of John and Crown streets, Mayor Oscar V. Newkirk said today.

Other important street work including the repair of those now used to detour away from the Broadway crossing project are on schedule for repair, but work will not start on them until the Broadway underpass is completed, he said.

Wilbur avenue, Smith and Ten-Broeck avenues and Grand street, are on schedule for the earliest possible date after completion of the Broadway project, and Fair street from Main to Henry street will be reconstructed, the mayor said.

Work is to be started early on John and Crown streets so that they will be completed before the summer rush of traffic.

Sutton Is Given

guards in Kings county court. He did not comment during a 15-minute castigation delivered by the judge.

Sutton and his henchman, Thomas (Scup) Kling, 45, were convicted yesterday by a Queens county jury of a $64,000 holdup of the Sunnyside branch of the Manufacturers Trust Company in Queens in 1950. They each face up to 30 years or more on this verdict. They will be sentenced later.

Kling Awaits Trial

Meanwhile, Kling was brought to Manhattan from Queens this morning to await trial on a charge of illegal possession of a gun. Like Sutton, the gun was found in his possession when he was arrested last February.

His attorney obtained an adjournment of the hearing until Friday. Because of his criminal record he may get a mandatory life sentence just like Sutton with whom he escaped from prison back in 1947.

Judge Goldstein reviewed Sutton's long criminal record going back to 1919 and including a murder charge on which Sutton was acquitted.

Goldstein said Sutton had committed 37 robberies that he knew of and declared that although some good could be found in many criminals "there isn't a vestige left in him (Sutton) that is worth a damn."

"Take him out and get rid of him," Goldstein concluded waving Sutton and his guards away.

Boat Operators Balk at Proposal

New York, April 2 (AP)—Charter fishing boat operators complain they may be put out of business by legislation proposed as a result of last September's Pelican disaster off Montauk Point, L. I.

The Pelican sank with a loss of more than 40 lives and some of the bodies were not recovered. Because it was under 15 gross tons, the vessel was not subject to federal regulation.

Since then Rep. Ernest Greenwood, a Democrat from Suffolk county, scene of the Pelican tragedy, has proposed that vessels carrying a dozen or more passengers come under federal supervision.

Called 'Unwarranted'

It was this bill the charter fishermen called "unwarranted, hampering and somewhat ridiculous" at the annual convention last night of the Greater New York Safety Council.

But State Senator Frank S. McCullough (R.-Westchester) replied that "people who go out on a boat for hire are entitled to safety; there ought to be legislation."

Russell Crandall, editor of "Fishing Long Island Waters," a magazine, said the Pelican "was the rarest of rarities * * *"

"Is the industry to be snarled up because of one terrible accident? We hope not," he said.

Captain Ira Gaynor, a small-boat operator of Babylon, asserted Greenwood "knows nothing about small boats" and that men like himself would be "put out of business."

Do You Remember

By SOPHIE MILLER

I always like to hear from Mrs. Irene K. Blass, for sometimes she sends me splendid poetry on local history or other items. This time she writes: "Just ran across an article on the old Delaware and Hudson canal. It was among some papers of my father's, (the late John W. "Skip" Herdman) who was conductor on the old U. and D. Catskill Mountain Division of the New York Central Railroad. He retired in 1938 after 52 years of service. It is a full page from the Kingston Daily Freeman, dated Thursday, April 14, 1938. The article is called "Delaware and Hudson Canal Co. office dismantled."

On the back was an advertisement from National Shoes at 312 Wall street. At the time they were selling "Ringless hosiery" for 45 cents. Handbags were going for 79 cents and as I take it no tax. At the time you could buy the following grocery items at Newberry's at 319 Wall street: Campbell beans with or without pork for 6 cents a can. Cranberry sauce the 17 ounce can for 10 cents. Palmolive or Camay soap for five cents a cake.

The Freeman article of 1938 on the "Company Office Building" (as we used to call it when we were youngsters and played there on its balconies) started off thus: "The big brick building overlooking the Rondout creek in the rear of the Temple Emanuel, built in 1855, as an office structure to take care of the increasing business of the Delaware & Hudson Canal Co., is no more." It further states: "Everett Brothers, Harry and Christopher, building wreckers of Woodstock, razed the old edifice that onec held the records and treasures of Rondout's most thriving business, the transportation of coal from Honesdale, Pa."

I have talked to Chris Everett when he razed other buildings of Kingston. He is not an ordinary "wrecker." He feels a sentimental value for the buildings, items and constructions and is glad to point out bull's eye glass, very wide beams, old Holland bricks. In fact he gave me one of the old bricks brought over from Holland from an old building also one of the old square nails. He told me, that at his home he has a sort of museum of the interesting items he has saved from some of these buildings. His stories are endless and interesting and they certainly deserve space in print. I would like to read a list of the local buildings he razed and some of the interesting items or constructions he found in them that few people, even the last owners know about.

In the 1938 Freeman article Harry Everett is quoted as saying: "There wasn't a crack to be found" in telling about the excellent conditions of the walls. "Back in 1855 they built buildings to last forever." The article further says: "As Harry Everett talked about the building itself, Chris held the "strong box" he found sealed in the vault. It was the lead chest containing the records and newspapers put away probably on the day the building was dedicated." (As I remember Chris told me, I think that he made quite a study of cornerstone items he found during the razing of important buildings.) In this building Chris found a New York Herald Tribune and Times dated Oct. 2, 1855, also a charter of the Village of Rondout etc. Chris is an attorney by profession, but prefers wrecking old buildings for the romance of going through old records.

Ike's Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers in Europe, the military arm of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, will be one year old on April 2.

O'Dwyer Defends His Administration

Mexico City, April 2 (AP)—Ambassador William O'Dwyer defended his administration as New York's mayor last night against criticisms levelled in a grand jury report on gambling conditions in the city.

As evidence of his zeal, the former mayor said he had assigned Investigation Commissioner John M. Murtagh and his department "as an added agency to cooperate with existing law enforcement agencies."

The jury absolves Murtagh of charges of criminal dereliction but accused O'Dwyer of being "more concerned with the reputation of his administration than its character."

In reply, O'Dwyer said he had instructed the investigations commissioner to give the police commissioner and prosecuting authorities "all information" he got on gambling—something "no other mayor in the history of the city had done before."

Never a Suggestion

"There never was a suggestion of criticism of Commissioner Murtagh's work" from either of the grand juries before which he appeared or the prosecutors with whom he cooperated, O'Dwyer added.

O'Dwyer said evidence of police corruption found by a Brooklyn grand jury "antedated my administration by at least five years." On becoming mayor, he added, he had kept ex-Mayor LaGuardia's police department "intact."

"I was so concerned with the problem of maximum law enforcement * * * that when the politicians scuttled Frank Hogan as a candidate to succeed himself as district attorney, I compelled his restoration on my ticket," O'Dwyer asserted.

Earlier he had said he found the grand jury's choice of words incomprehensible and commented: "How can a person have a reputation and not a character?"

O'Dwyer said he might comment further, "if necessary," after reading the full grand jury report.

Trouble Will Come With Bad Bidding

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

The hand shown today played an important part in the recent Vanderbilt Cup tournament. Both North and South stepped a trifle out of line in the bidding, and the result was that the partnership was in serious trouble.

North had a doubtful takeout double of one club. Most good players would wait for a better hand, both in high cards and in distribution. Some good players might overcall with one heart on the North hand; and others would simply pass.

When North did double, East redoubled, and it was up to South to pass with a weak hand. The actual bid of one no-trump made it impossible for North to rescue himself at one heart, and it warned North against interfering unless he had a really good suit.

If South had passed, North would have been in no serious trouble at one heart. The chances are that the opponents would have played the hand at a part score in spades or no-trump.

When the hand was actually played, Johnny Crawford, holding the West hand, found the killing opening lead—the ten of spades. South won with the king of spades to lead hearts toward the dummy. Crawford took the ace of hearts at once to lead his remaining spade, forcing out dummy's ace. Now there was no way to get to the South hand, so declarer led the king of hearts and tried a third round in the hope that the suit would break evenly.

This set up two heart tricks for Crawford. He took one of them and shifted to diamonds whereupon his partner, George Rapee, could get two top diamonds and the rest of the spades. Rapee could eventually lead a club through declarer, and the defenders eventually won ten tricks, collecting 700 points on a hand that they would normally drop below game.

Stripper Stops Traffic

New York, April 2 (AP)—A man identified by police as Frank J. Roth, 47, of Hartsdale, stopped traffic at 50th street and Madison avenue last night—by peeling off his clothes. He was down to underwear, shoes and socks when police hustled him off to a station house and thence to Metropolitan Hospital. He had, police said, dropped his outer clothing to the pavement and hopped onto the hood of a taxicab stalled in the traffic jam he caused.

Boat Operators Balk at Proposal

New York, April 2 (AP)—Charter fishing boat operators complain they may be put out of business by legislation proposed as a result of last September's Pelican disaster off Montauk Point, L. I.

The Pelican sank with a loss of more than 40 lives and some of the bodies were not recovered. Because it was under 15 gross tons, the vessel was not subject to federal regulation.

Since then Rep. Ernest Greenwood, a Democrat from Suffolk county, scene of the Pelican tragedy, has proposed that vessels carrying a dozen or more passengers come under federal supervision.

Called 'Unwarranted'

It was this bill the charter fishermen called "unwarranted, hampering and somewhat ridiculous" at the annual convention last night of the Greater New York Safety Council.

But State Senator Frank S. McCullough (R.-Westchester) replied that "people who go out on a boat for hire are entitled to safety; there ought to be legislation."

Russell Crandall, editor of "Fishing Long Island Waters," a magazine, said the Pelican "was the rarest of rarities * * *"

"Is the industry to be snarled up because of one terrible accident? We hope not," he said.

Captain Ira Gaynor, a small-boat operator of Babylon, asserted Greenwood "knows nothing about small boats" and that men like himself would be "put out of business."

Will Recruit Teachers

Albany, N. Y., April 2 (AP)—A special committee of educators will help spark a drive by the State Education Department to recruit elementary school teachers. Appointment of the eight-man group was announced yesterday by the Board of Regents.

Do You Remember

By SOPHIE MILLER

I always like to hear from Mrs. Irene K. Blass, for sometimes she sends me splendid poetry on local history or other items. This time she writes: "Just ran across an article on the old Delaware and Hudson canal. It was among some papers of my father's, (the late John W. "Skip" Herdman) who was conductor on the old U. and D. Catskill Mountain Division of the New York Central Railroad. He retired in 1938 after 52 years of service. It is a full page from the Kingston Daily Freeman, dated Thursday, April 14, 1938. The article is called "Delaware and Hudson Canal Co. office dismantled."

On the back was an advertisement from National Shoes at 312 Wall street. At the time they were selling "Ringless hosiery" for 45 cents. Handbags were going for 79 cents and as I take it no tax. At the time you could buy the following grocery items at Newberry's at 319 Wall street: Campbell beans with or without pork for 6 cents a can. Cranberry sauce the 17 ounce can for 10 cents. Palmolive or Camay soap for five cents a cake.

The Freeman article of 1938 on the "Company Office Building" (as we used to call it when we were youngsters and played there on its balconies) started off thus: "The big brick building overlooking the Rondout creek in the rear of the Temple Emanuel, built in 1855, as an office structure to take care of the increasing business of the Delaware & Hudson Canal Co., is no more." It further states: "Everett Brothers, Harry and Christopher, building wreckers of Woodstock, razed the old edifice that onec held the records and treasures of Rondout's most thriving business, the transportation of coal from Honesdale, Pa."

I have talked to Chris Everett when he razed other buildings of Kingston. He is not an ordinary "wrecker." He feels a sentimental value for the buildings, items and constructions and is glad to point out bull's eye glass, very wide beams, old Holland bricks. In fact he gave me one of the old bricks brought over from Holland from an old building also one of the old square nails. He told me, that at his home he has a sort of museum of the interesting items he has saved from some of these buildings. His stories are endless and interesting and they certainly deserve space in print. I would like to read a list of the local buildings he razed and some of the interesting items or constructions he found in them that few people, even the last owners know about.

In the 1938 Freeman article Harry Everett is quoted as saying: "There wasn't a crack to be found" in telling about the excellent conditions of the walls. "Back in 1855 they built buildings to last forever." The article further says: "As Harry Everett talked about the building itself, Chris held the "strong box" he found sealed in the vault. It was the lead chest containing the records and newspapers put away probably on the day the building was dedicated." (As I remember Chris told me, I think that he made quite a study of cornerstone items he found during the razing of important buildings.) In this building Chris found a New York Herald Tribune and Times dated Oct. 2, 1855, also a charter of the Village of Rondout etc. Chris is an attorney by profession, but prefers wrecking old buildings for the romance of going through old records.

Ike's Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers in Europe, the military arm of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, will be one year old on April 2.

O'Dwyer Defends HisAdministration

Mexico City, April 2 (AP)—Ambassador William O'Dwyer defended his administration as New York's mayor last night against criticisms levelled in a grand jury report on gambling conditions in the city.

As evidence of his zeál, the former mayor said he had assigned Investigation Commissioner John M. Murtagh and his department "as an added agency to cooperate with existing law enforcement agencies."

The jury absolves Murtagh of charges of criminal dereliction but accused O'Dwyer of being "more concerned with the reputation of his administration than its character."

In reply, O'Dwyer said he had instructed the investigations commissioner to give the police commissioner and prosecuting authorities "all information" he got on gambling—something "no other mayor in the history of the city had done before."

Never a Suggestion

"There never was a suggestion of criticism of Commissioner Murtagh's work" from either of the grand juries before which he appeared or the prosecutors with whom he cooperated, O'Dwyer added.

O'Dwyer said evidence of police corruption found by a Brooklyn grand jury "antedated my administration by at least five years." On becoming mayor, he added, he had kept ex-Mayor LaGuardia's police department "intact."

"I was so concerned with the problem of maximum law enforcement * * * that when the politicians scuttled Frank Hogan as a candidate to succeed himself as district attorney, I compelled his restoration on my ticket," O'Dwyer asserted.

Earlier he had said he found the grand jury's choice of words incomprehensible and commented: "How can a person have a reputation and not a character?"

O'Dwyer said he might comment further, "if necessary," after reading the full grand jury report.

DONT LET GAME RUIN FRIENDSHIP

BY OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

"This is a question I'd like you to settle," writes a correspondent who asks me not to mention her name or town.

"We were playing a friendly game of two-handed Canasta. My opponent had five kings and five jacks on the table. She added two wild cards to the jacks but had not finished her play.

"She then picked up the wild cards and added them to the kings, saying she had made an error. She had just noticed that I had melded three kings, so it was clear that she would surely need wild cards for her kings but might not need them for her jacks.

"I said that she couldn't move the wild cards from the jacks to the kings; that once the cards were down on the table they could not be shifted.

"My opponent put the wild cards back with the jacks, saying that she did this not because she was wrong but because I was her guest. She made me feel like two cents.

"Was my statement of the law correct? Was it proper for me to state the law? Was it proper for my opponent to act as she did when I stated the law?"

Only one of these questions is easy to answer. My correspondent's understanding of the law was absolutely correct. When those deuces were put down on the table in a legal meld they could not be shifted. They had to stay with the jacks.

The other questions have to do with human relations and friendship as much as they have to do with the rules of card games. It's very hard to answer the questions without knowing the people and the situation.

In a tournament, the laws are strictly enforced. Even in an ordinary club game, every player expects the rules to be enforced. The same principle holds when people who sometimes play in clubs happen to be playing in somebody's home instead of a club. They are still the sort of people who follow rules carefully.

But there are thousands of other people who never play in clubs or tournaments and who never have any exact knowledge of rules or penalties. They would never penalize an opponent, and they expect other people to be equally lenient with them.

In theory, they should know the rules and be bound by them—but we have to face facts rather than theories. Against such an opponent just forget about the rules and strictness. It's better to keep your friends than to win a card game.

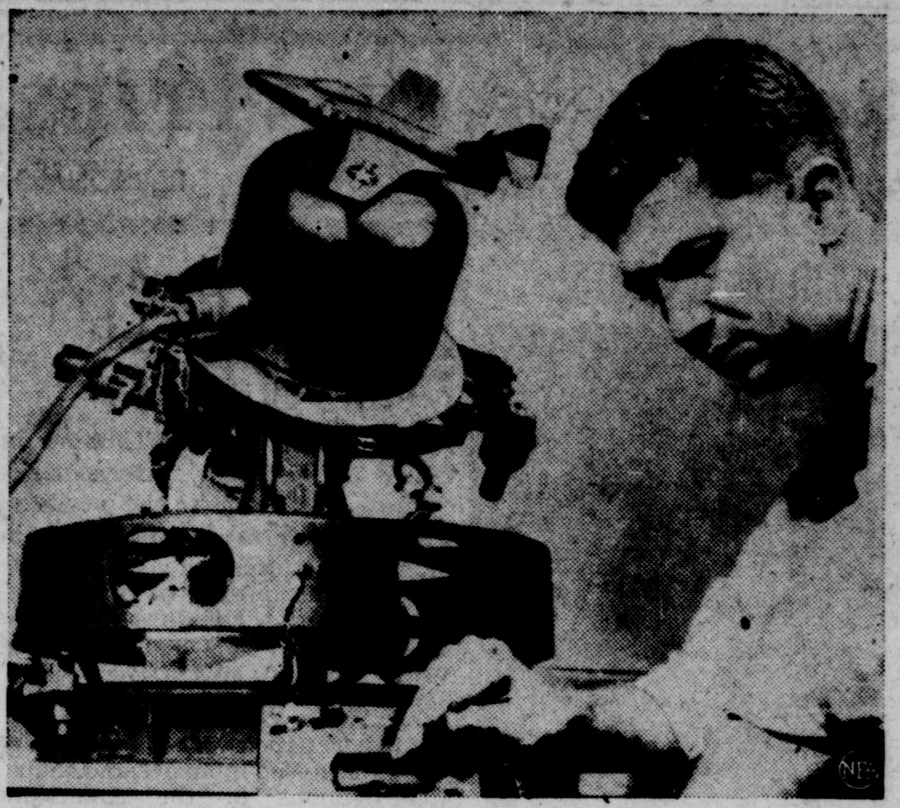
New Law Alters Two State Tax Features

Albany, N. Y., April 2 (AP)—Effective next year, your state income tax must total at least $40 before you may pay it on the installment plan.

Governor Dewey signed a bill yesterday raising the minimum amount from $20 to $40.

The new law, which will be effective on returns made on 1952 incomes, also calls for payment of the third of the four equal installments on Nov. 15, instead of Oct. 15, and the fourth payment on Feb. 15, instead of Jan. 15.

The due dates of the first and second installments—April 15 and July 15 — were not changed.



THE PUSH-BUTTON "BRAIN"—An engineer studies the Navy's new automatic pilot, being tested in Washington, D. C. The G-3, as it is known, will hold a jet interceptor plane at the desired heading and altitude. By manipulating push-buttons and a control-panel "stick," the pilot can maneuver the plane. Another step on the road to autopilot control of high-speed interceptors, the device was developed by General Electric in cooperation with Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics.

Gwinn Says WSB Members Once Got Pay From Unions

Washington, April 2 (AP)—Rep. Gwinn (R.-N.Y.) says some of the public members of the Wage Stabilization Board were receiving compensation from the CIO and the AFL just prior to their appointment to the board.

He made the statement in a telegram to President Truman, which he put in the congressional record yesterday.

Although public members of the board are supposed to be "impartial representatives of the public," Gwinn said, some of them "have long supped at labor's table."

Noting the board's recent recommendations in the steel dispute, Gwinn asked:

"Was it not a foregone conclusion that this board, stacked as it was, would vote as it did, 8 to 4, for the biggest single wage raise in industrial history?"

Gwinn said Nathan Feinsinger, WSB chairman, "has been the favored arbitrator of the CIO since 1943 and paid very substantial amounts by them."

John Dunlop, another public member, was described by Gwinn as "almost continuously in the pay of AFL since 1948 to settle AFL jurisdictional disputes within the union."

George Taylor, former chairman who recently resigned, was immediately employed by the CIO "for a reported $20,000 a year," Gwinn claimed.

Subversive Expose Studied at Sorosis, Voting Stressed

Members of Sorosis Club were called upon Monday afternoon to "arouse themselves to the privilege of voting as a means of exerting a tremendous force for good government." The plea was made by Mrs. Conrad J. Heiselman, in conjunction with a paper she prepared on the subversive expose dealt with in John T. Flynn's book, While You Slept.

In her paper, Mrs. Heiselman cited those who influence and shape the opinions of the American people. She included in this group, preachers, actors, educators and politicians who make use of newspapers, radio and motion pictures for their propaganda.

Quoting the author, the blunders of the State Department were mentioned in relation to the "handling of affairs with China, Russia and Korea which have resulted in the present war in Korea."

Communism was exemplified as the greatest enemy because the Communists are waging a war upon "our system of life, government and economic organization." The paper was concluded with "it is the enemies within our walls, not Stalin's soldiers or atomic bombs which will destroy us."

Mrs. Boyd N. Williams read the paper prepared by Mrs. Heiselman.

HER PARENTS GIVE RECEPTION IN HIS PARENTS' HOUSE

The mother of the bride is troubled about the propriety of giving the wedding reception in the house of the bridegroom's parents. Her letter explains: "My daughter is to be married shortly and since we live in a small apartment, the bridegroom's parents have suggested that we have the reception in their house, which is very large. We will, of course, give the reception. I would like your opinion on this before deciding, as we do not want to do anything that could be criticized."

If there is neither club nor hotel where the reception could be held, the reason for giving the reception at the bridegroom's house would be perfectly well understood. In fact, this plan is by no means unheard of. The invitations would go out in your and your husband's names and at the end of the invitations the following is added:

at the residence of
Mr. and Mrs. John Brown
Tuxedo Park, New York.

This explains that you are defraying all of the expenses of the reception and that the house of the bridegroom's parents is obviously being used because of its size.

Only While in Transit

Dear Mrs. Post: Will you please comment on the use of slip covers for the protection of leather luggage for traveling. Are they in good taste?

Answer: Yes — perfectly. Although one is apt to wonder why when you have beautiful luggage, you want to hide it. The covers are taken off when you arrive and the fresh unspoiled luggage not only stands in your room but remains a beautiful possession for many years. (Uncovered leather all too soon becomes as dull and ugly as the sole of an old shoe.

Manners on the Street

Dear Mrs Post: When a man is walking with two women, where does he correctly walk, and does this same answer apply to a woman walking with two men?

Answer: While she may very properly walk between the two men, he should avoid being sandwiched between two women.

Albany, N. Y., April 2 (AP)—Sales of farm products grossed a record 957 million dollars in New York state last year. Estimating the total yesterday, the State Commerce Department noted that the 1951 figure topped by 7 million the previous high of 950 million set in 1948 and was 18 per cent higher than the 1950 total. The department observed that the total acreage and the number of farm workers had declined steadily since 1940. It attributed the increased sales to higher prices, use of more machinery, greater efficiency and more scientific agricultural methods.

In the 17th century, the Swiss adopted an extra commandment: "Thou shalt not smoke."

Federal Aid Asked

Albany, N. Y., April 2 (AP)—New York state has reappropriated 25 million dollars for home-front bomb shelters and Governor Dewey wants the federal government to come across with its share of the cost quickly. Dewey says that in the 15 months since enactment of federal legislation to provide 50 per cent of bomb shelter costs, "not one dollar" has been given to the states by Washington. Under the federal program, the national government was to contribute half the cost of bomb shelters in each state. In New York, the state will split the remaining 50 per cent with municipalities.

Synagogue News

Passover

(The following is a release made by the Commission on Information About Judaism of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations and the Central Conference of American Rabbis):

Jewish people will soon celebrate their great holiday of freedom, Passover, when special foods will be eaten and special ceremonies held in commemoration of the liberation of their ancestors from slavery in the Egypt of the Pharaohs, more than 3000 years ago. Unleavened bread or "matso" will be served instead of ordinary leavened bread, in order to recall the hurried flight of the Israelites from Egypt, when they did not have time even to wait for their newly-baked bread to rise.

Passover will be ushered in Wednesday evening, April 9, with the Seder, a unique religious service meant to teach children the purpose of the holiday and held, not in the synagogue, but around the supper table at home. The Seder includes a festive meal. Psalms about the struggles of the Israelites and prayers for the future triumph of freedom are read from an old book called the Haggadah. Holiday folk songs are sung.

The youngest child asks what Passover means, and the father answers and explains the holiday in the words of the ancient sages. The door is opened and the prophet Elijah, who stands for freedom, is made welcome in the spirit. The father hides a piece of "matso," and the children search for it. Large families have yearly re-unions around the Seder table, and peace of mind and leisureliness reign there, in keeping with the spirit of a holiday of freedom.

Passover, called Pesach in Hebrew, also celebrates spring and the beauties of nature. It dates back to the ancient days of Moses.

Conservative and Orthodox Jews will observe Passover for eight days, until April 17, and will have a Seder on each of the first two nights. Reform Jews will keep the holiday seven days, until April 16, and will celebrate the Seder on the first night.

Man Held in Jail

New York, April 2 (AP)—A stevedoring company employe—reported to be in "great danger"—was held in jail today as a material witness in the Brooklyn waterfront rackets investigation. The witness, Milton J. Fries, 56, chief timekeeper for the Atlantic Stevedoring Company, was put in the civil prison yesterday when unable to raise $25,000 bail. The same company's head paymaster, a witness in the inquiry, died in a plunge from a hotel room last week.

Ike Says U. S. Must

would ultimately break their economies."

Eisenhower presented a 12,000-word report to America and the other 13 nations aligned in defense against communism. His voice was heard on international hookups and his figure was seen, through films, on television screens across America. This was a special 750-word recording designed to give the gist of the full report. In it he observed:

"The purpose of our governments (in forming NATO) was a very simple one—to retain the peace through establishment of a sound collective security."

Full Success Distant

Complete success is "still a long way off," he said, adding:

"On the discouraging side, for example, we have had the strained economies in Europe developing, threatening and slowing previously predicted schedules. We know that, in spite of the expenditure of vast sums of money in the United States and elsewhere, the flow of equipment has not been as rapid as previously predicted.

"In Korea, Indochina and Malaya, NATO nations of Europe and in America are carrying very heavy burdens; burdens that are costly, both in blood and treasure. They have a direct effect upon our efforts here to establish a secure defensive arrangement in western Europe.

"On the encouraging side, there has been almost a revolutionary rise in the morale of the armed forces. Their training is efficient, directed by some of the most experienced soldiers, sailors and airmen alive today. In each case, in each unit, there is a growing confidence that they can do their job."

Job Was Tough

Their job was a tough one. The report said the soldiers on the allied side faced 225 Russian and satellite divisions and 20,000 Russian planes, good in quality and steadily improving.

On the allied side are fewer than 50 divisions and 4,000 planes to be ready by the end of this year.

"The Soviet army casts its shadow over the length and breadth of Europe," he said. "The satellite countries have increased the size and combat effectiveness of their armed forces. Reports from behind the Iron Curtain indicate that the restiveness of these captive peoples has led to even tighter, tougher, more brutal measures of state control. The familiar technique of the purge, deliberate terror, and intimidation has forced a measure of unity—however unhappy—in this area.

"The Soviet air force in Eastern Germany is currently replacing obsolescent aircraft with jet planes. Work on airfields, communications, and supply installations is being vigorously pursued in eastern Europe.

Tide Has Turned

"Nevertheless. the tide has begun to flow our way and the situation of the free worlds is brighter than it was a year ago. At. Lisbon, our member nations made great headway on issues vital to our continued progress. They strengthened our eastern flank by bringing into NATO the stout-hearted peoples of Greece and Turkey. They agreed to the concept of a European defense community and a close relationship with the German Federal Republic."

He listed plans for the 4,000 planes, 25 active divisions and 25 reserve divisions as added security factors, then added:

"I personally would look upon completion of this program as clear material evidence that the basic goals of our combined enterprise are going to be achieved."

That was an important kick-off line in the report, for it indicated Eisenhower's belief that he could go back to America able to point to a defense job well on the road to completion.

With an Eisenhower boom on the way in the United States, the general is expected here to let President Truman know within the next few days that he would like to be relieved from his command late in May. There he will share, in a limited way fitting his own outline, in the campaign for the Republican nomination.

The word "priest" is a contracted form of "presbyter."

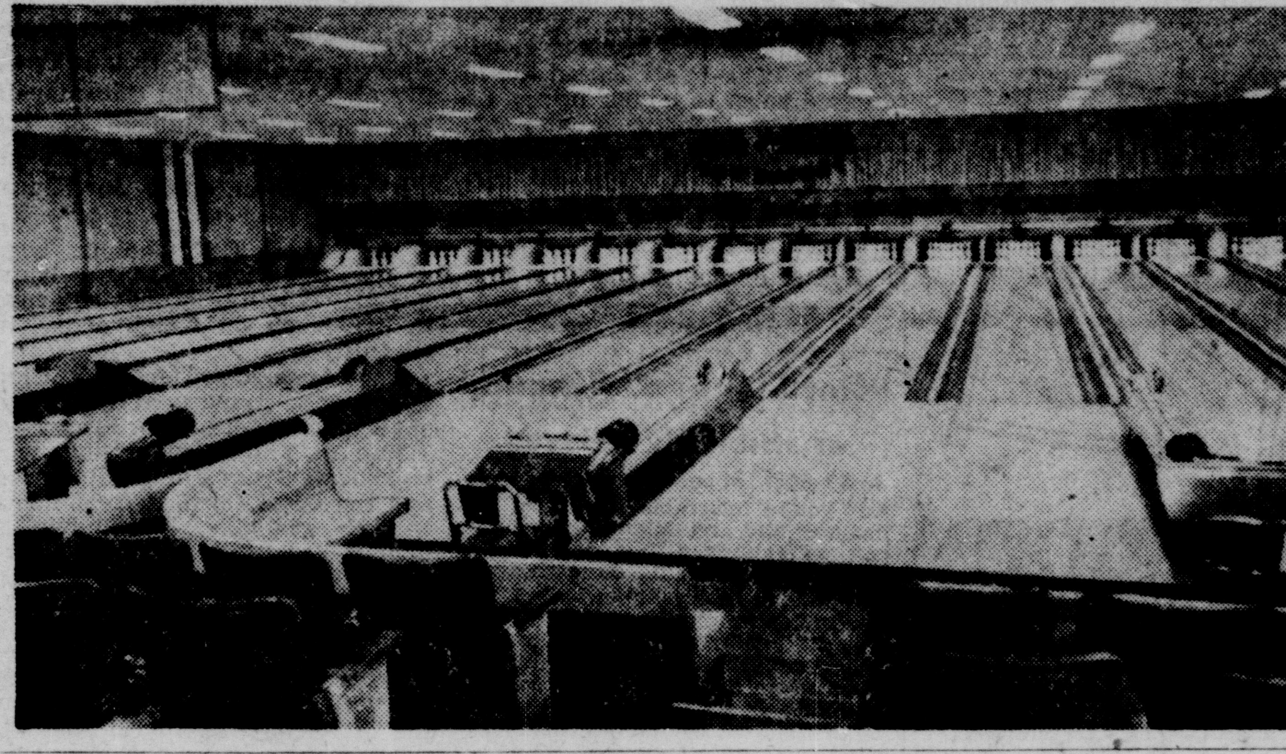
Because considerable space is taken up by temporary accommodations required to operate the tournament, seating facilities will be limited.



50 Club Five Wins 2nd in 'B' League

The 50 Club defeated Kaplan Bag, 48-43, in a game of tight zone defenses and deliberate shooting to cinch second place in the "B" division of the YMCA Basketball League, last night on the Y court.

Ahead all the way, the 50 Club rode to victory on John Burris' sharpshooting in a contest that was brilliantly played by relatively inexperienced squads.

Burris caged 17 points for the winners, while Bob Baumer and Jerry Kaplan had 15 and 14 respectively for Kaplans.

In a preliminary, Trinity Lutheran Seniors trounced a stacked Stone Ridge lineup, 54-38, after trailing by a point at the quarter mark. Two big periods—19 in the second and 20 in the fourth—did the heavy damage.

Roger Brandt's 20 markers paced the Lutherans and Ronnie Marks hit for 14. Sickler and George Telepas rimmed 15 and 12 respectively for the Ridgers.

Lovellette Will Remember Historic Muff Longer Than the 1888 Points

New York, April 2 (AP)—Basketball record books will show that Clyde Lovellette scored the highest three-year point total of any player in history — an astounding 1,888. But the points the big guy will never forget are the two he didn't make last night.

The human scoring scourge from Kansas University missed perhaps the most important field goal of his life—"a dinky old one-footer"—as his team dropped a tingling 62-60 decision to the Peoria Caterpillars in the finals of the Olympic basketball tournament.

Too, it will go into the books that Peoria, the AAU champion, won the game when Howie Williams connected with a 20-foot one-hander with eight seconds to go.

But if you talk to anyone who saw the game—there were 6,234 of 'em in Madison Square Garden last night—they'll tell you Lovellette's muff of a simple layup was the big story.

With the score tied 60-60 and 15 seconds left, Lovellette electrified the crowd by stealing the ball from Peoria's Marcus Freiberger.

The 244-pound giant lumbered down the court with nary a defender under the Caterpillar goal. There was a Kansas teammate on each side of the basket.

Lovellette strode in himself—aiming to dunk one of the easiest baskets he'd ever made.

But the ball wouldn't behave. It rolled off to the left, leaving everyone in the big arena stunned.

"I felt sick," said the record-breaking All-America later. "After making all those tougher baskets I had to go and blow that dinky old one-footer."

HANDLING CATFISH CAUGHT WITH A JUG

Copr. '52 Gen'l Features Corp. Tm-World Rights Resd.

SEVERAL CANS ARE THROWN OVERBOARD IN A GROUP AS YOUR DRIFT BEGINS. ROW ALONG WITHIN 75 FEET SO THAT YOU MAY QUICKLY REACH A CAN WHOSE ACTION INDICATES A CATFISH IS ON.

GIVE THE CAN A YANK TO SET THE HOOK DEEP IN THE FISH AND LET GO QUICKLY. THE INSTANT THE HOOK IS SET THE CAN MAY DISAPPEAR AS YOUR FISH STARTS HIS ACROBATICS. FOLLOW THE CAN. WHEN IT IS QUIET AGAIN, GRASP THE LINE BETWEEN THE THUMBS AND FOREFINGERS AND HAUL IT UP, LETTING IT LIE LOOSE WITH THE CAN IN THE WATER IN CASE THE FISH DIVES AGAIN. IF SO, LET IT GO AND REPEAT UNTIL FISH IS READY TO NET.

Training Camp News in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

St. Petersburg, Fla., April 2 (AP)—Preacher Roe, veteran lefthander of the Brooklyn Dodgers, has declined the honor of pitching Brooklyn's opening day game this month.

Roe is touting Chris Van Cuyk, a towerling lefthander for the honor.

"You know who it will be," Roe said today. "Chris has earned it. He's ready to open right now. I guess I can pitch one of those games in Boston, maybe the third one, but the first one. I haven't been able to get them out for four innings, yet."

Westrum in Slump

Denver, Colo., April 2 (AP)—New York Giant Manager Leo Durocher is worried about catcher Wes Westrum.

Th stocky receiver has collected only three hits in 32 times at bat and Durocher claims the poor hitting has affected Westrum's catching.

Lakeland, Fla., April 2 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers stayed in camp today for some heavy concentration on hitting.

Detroit's weakness at the plate was underlined again yesterday when the team collected only five singles in losing 5-0 to the St. Louis Cardinals. It was the Tigers' 12th defeat in 21 exhibition games and their fifth shutout.

Another day of workouts is scheduled for tomorrow before the Tigers hit the road for home. Their first road game will be with Birmingham of the Southern Association Saturday.

Rookie Makes Nats

Orlando, Fla., April 2 (AP)—Buck Fleshman, 21-year-old rookie fastballer, has practically cinched a berth with the Washington Senators.

"He has it made—I think," Manager Bucky Harris said.

Fleshman, who won 20 games and lost 9 with Class "B" Charlotte yast year, had his contract assigned to Washington yesterday. He pitches in the Senators' exhibition game here today with Cincinnati.

The Senators, meanwhile, were in a trading mood. They are dickering with the New York Yankees and, reportedly, offered Cleveland their Mickey Harris for the Indians' Bob Chakales in an even swap of pitchers.

Denver, April 2 (AP)—With Bob Lemon on the mound, the Cleveland Indians try to make it seven straight today over the National League champion New York Giants.

Denverites go for this big league stuff, too. A crowd of 17,806 paid to see yesterday's 7-4 Indian victory.

Counting today's game, the teams have 12 left to play in their exhibition series. Jim Hearn was selected to hurl for the Giants, who have yet to win one over Cleveland this year.

Cardinals' Solly Hemus 'Arrives' As Full-Fledged Major Leaguer

By RALPH RODEN
(Associated Press Writer)

The dossier on Solly Hemus, St. Louis Cardinal infielder, has a new entry under the column called "attributes."

Last spring only the intangible "hustle" was listed but now "good hitter" has been added.

Hemus is probably the most impressive player on Manager Eddie Stanky's squad.

The former Navy chief petty officer from San Diego, Calif., is banging Grapefruit League pitching at a .500 clip, a pace of course which will decline.

But Hemus' hitting is not just a flash in the pan. The 27-year-old "hollar guy" improved vastly during the latter half of the 1951 season. He wound up the year with a .281 mark but socked a juicy .344 clip from mid-July on.

Hustle alone earned Hemus his major league spangles.

"You've got to make room for him some place," Marty Marion said last spring. "Can't let a guy like that go," the former Card manager concluded.

Finished With Splurge

Hemus was listed as a second baseman in 1951 but Solly figured he had no chance of taking the job away from Red Schoendienst so he practiced playing short and third during the winter.

Once Hemus took over as a regular in July he was in the line-up for keeps.

Hemus pounded out a triple and two singles yesterday as the Cards defeated the Detroit Tigers, 5-0, at St. Petersburg, Fla. The blows increased Hemus' record to 15 hits in 30 trips.

Veterans Cliff Chambers and Red Munger blanked the Tigers on seven hits. The shutout was the sixth this spring for the Red Bird staff.

The Cleveland Indians made it six straight over the New York Giants by beating the National League champions, 7-4, before 17,806 fans at Denver, Colo. The crowd was the second largest ever to see a baseball game in Denver.

Third inning home runs by Larry Doby and Al Rosen off Max Lanier featured the Indian drive. Al Dark banged out a homer, triple and single for the losers.

Brooklyn smashed Cincinnati's six game winning streak by crushing the Reds, 7-3, at Tampa, Fla. Carl Furillo and Dick Williams collected three hits each to lead the Dodger attack.

Portland, Me. — Bob Stecher, 166, Portland, Me. stopped Charley Goulart, 157½, Cambridge, Mass. 9.

Lovellette Will Remember Historic Muff Longer Than the 1888 Points

New York, April 2 (AP)—Basketball record books will show that Clyde Lovellette scored the highest three-year point total of any player in history — an astounding 1,888. But the points the big guy will never forget are the two he didn't make last night.

The human scoring scourge from Kansas University missed perhaps the most important field goal of his life—"a dinky old one-footer"—as his team dropped a tingling 62-60 decision to the Peoria Caterpillars in the finals of the Olympic basketball tournament.

Too, it will go into the books that Peoria, the AAU champion, won the game when Howie Williams connected with a 20-foot one-hander with eight seconds to go.

But if you talk to anyone who saw the game—there were 6,234 of 'em in Madison Square Garden last night—they'll tell you Lovellettes muff of a simple layup was the big story.

With the score tied 60-60 and 15 seconds left, Lovellette electrified the crowd by stealing the ball from Peoria's Marcus Freiberger.

The 244-pound giant lumbered down the court with nary a defender under the Caterpillar goal. There was a Kansas teammate on each side of the basket.

Lovellette strode in himself—aiming to dunk one of the easiest baskets he'd ever made.

But the ball wouldn't behave. It rolled off to the left, leaving everyone in the big arena stunned.

"I felt sick," said the record-breaking All-America later. "Aftter making all those tougher baskets I had to go and blow that dinky old one-footer."

HANDLING CATFISH CAUGHT WITH A JUG

SEVERAL CANS ARE THROWN OVERBOARD IN A GROUP AS YOUR DRIFT BEGINS. ROW ALONG WITHIN 75 FEET SO THAT YOU MAY QUICKLY REACH A CAN WHOSE ACTION INDICATES A CATFISH IS ON.

GIVE THE CAN A YANK TO SET THE HOOK DEEP IN THE FISH AND LET GO QUICKLY. THE INSTANT THE HOOK IS SET THE CAN MAY DISAPPEAR AS YOUR FISH STARTS HIS ACROBATICS. FOLLOW THE CAN. WHEN IT IS QUIET AGAIN, GRASP THE LINE BETWEEN THE THUMBS AND FOREFINGERS AND HAUL IT UP, LETTING IT LIE LOOSE WITH THE CAN IN THE WATER IN CASE THE FISH DIVES AGAIN. IF SO, LET IT GO AND REPEAT UNTIL FISH IS READY TO NET.

Training Camp News in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

St. Petersburg, Fla., April 2 (AP)—Preacher Roe, veteran lefthander of the Brooklyn Dodgers, has declined the honor of pitching Brooklyn's opening day game this month.

Roe is touting Chris Van Cuyk, a towerling lefthander for the honor.

"You know who it will be," Roe said today. "Chris has earned it. He's ready to open right now. I guess I can pitch one of those games in Boston, maybe the third one, but the first one. I haven't been able to get them out for four innings, yet."

Westrum in Slump

Denver, Colo., April 2 (AP)—New York Giant Manager Leo Durocher is worried about catcher Wes Westrum.

Th stocky receiver has collected only three hits in 32 times at bat and Durocher claims the poor hitting has affected Westrum's catching.

Lakeland, Fla., April 2 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers stayed in camp today for some heavy concentration on hitting.

Detroit's weakness at the plate was underlined again yesterday when the team collected only five singles in losing 5-0 to the St. Louis Cardinals. It was the Tigers' 12th defeat in 21 exhibition games and their fifth shutout.

Another day of workouts is scheduled for tomorrow before the Tigers hit the road for home. Their first road game will be with Birmingham of the Southern Association Saturday.

Rookie Makes Nats

Orlando, Fla., April 2 (AP)—Buck Fleshman, 21-year-old rookie fastballer, has practically cinched a berth with the Washington Senators.

"He has it made—I think," Manager Bucky Harris said.

Fleshman, who won 20 games and lost 9 with Class "B" Charlotte yast year, had his contract assigned to Washington yesterday. He pitches in the Senators' exhibition game here today with Cincinnati.

The Senators, meanwhile, were in a trading mood. They are dickering with the New York Yankees and, reportedly, offered Cleveland their Mickey Harris for the Indians' Bob Chakales in an even swap of pitchers.

Denver, April 2 (AP)—With Bob Lemon on the mound, the Cleveland Indians try to make it seven straight today over the National League champion New York Giants.

Denverites go for this big league stuff, too. A crowd of 17,806 paid to see yesterday's 7-4 Indian victory.

Counting today's game, the teams have 12 left to play in their exhibition series. Jim Hearn was selected to hurl for the Giants, who have yet to win one over Cleveland this year.

Cardinals' Solly Hemus 'Arrives' As Full-Fledged Major Leaguer

By RALPH RODEN

(Associated Press Writer)

The dossier on Solly Hemus, St. Louis Cardinal infielder, has a new entry under the column called "attributes."

Last spring only the intangible "hustle" was listed but now "good hitter" has been added.

Hemus is probably the most impressive player on Manager Eddie Stanky's squad.

The former Navy chief petty officer from San Diego, Calif., is banging Grapefruit League pitching at a .500 clip, a pace of course which will decline.

But Hemus' hitting is not just a flash in the pan. The 27-year-old "hollar guy" improved vastly during the latter half of the 1951 season. He wound up the year with a .281 mark but socked a juicy .344 clip from mid-July on.

Hustle alone earned Hemus his major league spangles.

"You've got to make room for him some place," Marty Marion said last spring. "Can't let a guy like that go," the former Card manager concluded.

Finished With Splurge

Hemus was listed as a second baseman in 1951 but Solly figured he had no chance of taking the job away from Red Schoendienst so he practiced playing short and third during the winter.

Once Hemus took over as a regular in July he was in the line-up for keeps.

Hemus pounded out a triple and two singles yesterday as the Cards defeated the Detroit Tigers, 5-0, at St. Petersburg, Fla. The blows increased Hemus' record to 15 hits in 30 trips.

Veterans Cliff Chambers and Red Munger blanked the Tigers on seven hits. The shutout was the sixth this spring for the Red Bird staff.

The Cleveland Indians made it six straight over the New York Giants by beating the National League champions, 7-4, before 17,806 fans at Denver, Colo. The crowd was the second largest ever to see a baseball game in Denver.

Third inning home runs by Larry Doby and Al Rosen off Max Lanier featured the Indian drive. Al Dark banged out a homer, triple and single for the losers.

Brooklyn smashed Cincinnati's six game winning streak by crushing the Reds, 7-3, at Tampa, Fla. Carl Furillo and Dick Williams collected three hits each to lead the Dodger attack.

Portland, Me. — Bob Stecher, 166, Portland, Me. stopped Charley Goulart, 157½, Cambridge, Mass. 9.

100-Yard Invitation Dash Top Feature In Hudson Valley Relay Carnival

A special 100-yard invitation dash bringing together the 16 best scholastic sprinters in the area will be the main attraction of the first annual Hudson Valley Relay Carnival on Saturday, May 10 at the New Paltz High School track.

The track carnival replaces the Newburgh Relays, a standard fixture for schoolboy athletes for the past several years.

Site of the meet will be the quarter mile track which is highly responsible for attracting the attention of several schools and coaches. Final details on this new track were completed a few days ago.

Thirty-six events are scheduled. The individual events will be the 180-yard low hurdles, discus, high jump, javelin, shot put, broad jump and pole vault.

Spinning Reel Boon to Anglers

By AL McCLANE
(Fishing Editor)

The other day I took our neighbor's nine-year-old son out fishing. Teddy has been hot on my trail for the past few months—and frankly, I dreaded the day when two of us would be confined to a rowboat.

Things didn't turn out badly, though; in fact, he caught a large pickerel among lesser fishes, and I only had to retrieve Teddy four times. All of which brought to mind how possible fishing has become for anybody, regardless of their age.

In the old days, learning to cast was a slow process. You could count on at least one year of fundamentals before getting around to actual fish catching. Fly casting and bait casting are difficult arts.

Fishing Simpler Than It Seems

When a child is at the "curiosity" stage, he wants to catch fish—not get fouled up in a subject which most adults don't understand. Spinning has made the catching possible—leaving art as a later development.

A good many people who never even had a nodding acquaintance with the business end of a rod until a few days ago are now casting like experts, and taking a fair share of fish. As a matter of record, young, old, blind and feeble are tossing baits all over the landscape with startling ease and deadly results—thanks to the spinning reel.

This reel is designed so that the spool doesn't turn. The line simply peels off the spool, just the way thread peels off a spool when you hold it by one end. In terms of fishing this means no more foul-ups. No matter how clumsy and inexperienced the operator, ten minutes of practice will put him in the big leagues.

We've seen eight-year-olds, one-armed veterans, and people whose hands were crippled by rheumatism turn out star performances, after a few trial casts. Many folks never take up fishing because they lack self-confidence. Nobody can enjoy a sport unless he masters the fundamentals, and novices are apt to throw in the towel after long practice sessions with more complicated casting tackle.

New Crop of Anglers in the Making

These days are gone forever and we predict a quarter-million new anglers in the United States before long. It happened in Europe where spinning began and it's happening here. One manufacturer has sold more than 200,000 spinning reels in the past three years and he's 40,000 reels behind in his orders for 1952.

The nice thing about spinning aside from its simplicity, is that the tackle is versatile enough to be used for anything short of sea-monsters, and it doesn't make much difference whether you use live bait or artificial lures. Spinning tackle comes in various sizes, and once you get snagged in this game, the chances are that you'll want two or three outfits to get the most out of your fishing.

For most purposes, a seven-foot glass rod, spinning reel, and a nylon line will serve nicely. In fact, such a rig would handle everything from sunfish to salmon.

Try this fishing business. It's more fun than a barrel of monkeys.

THE RUMINATOR

By HUMPHREY B. NEILL
A Column of Contrary Opinion

This is not a poltical column so we shall not attempt any interpretation of Mr. Truman's withdrawal from the Presidential race from a political angle. Certainly you have read enough about that already—and will read more as time passes.

From an economic viewpoint, however—with which these pieces are usually concerned—the President's announced decision may have many repercussions not now foreseen. Also, as it happens, it was immediately followed by the resignation of Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson.

The withdrawal of Truman and a wide-open fight on the wage-and-price controversy certainly will add consternation to confusion.

In a practical sense the government will be without a "head" for nearly ten months. Mr. Truman will be president, of course, but as he will not succeed himself (unless he changes his mind and "accepts a draft" at Chicago in July)—as he will not succeed himself he at once loses a tremendous amount of political control. This will be manifest at once, I think. You will see the difference very soon, I feel confident, in the various hearings in Washington.

In the immediate problems of the Steel industry, the resignation of Wilson and withdrawal of Truman—coupled with a perfectly clear indication that there is both a civilian-goods' slump and much greater supplies of steel than had been predicted—in this chaotic situation almost any outcome is possible.

Wilson's resignation strengthens the spines of the steel managers, undoubtedly, because steel management will feel that Wilson had looked into all corners of the problem and was adamantly against the extreme wage-increases recommended by the Wage Stabilization Board. So it is a foregone conclusion that the steel companies will put up a stiff fight, even up to point of accepting a strike. At the same time, Mr. Truman obviously will not "control" the situation as fairly as before his announcement.

It seems to the Ruminator, without benefit of several days of more "ruminating," that we shall find the Congress more and more taking over control of some of these major economic problems. This may sound like good news, but on the other hand it must be remembered that the Congress moves slowly. It is a large body, loaded with diverse opinions and weighted down with political considerations. So, it is a fair prediction that many important legislative acts may be slow in coming into law. The whole stabilization and control machinery is up for inspection and overhaul. Truman's withdrawal and Wilson's resignation was the immediate cause of a postponement of hearings on Monday of this week.

As the unions and the steel industry argue their cases they will be influenced, no doubt, by influences they had not contemplated last weekend.

Public psychology is a mercurial factor, as we have often discussed. The public, we know, has been taking unusual interest in political matters. It is not often in a presidential election year that the people get so excited about "candidates" as they have these past three months.

At the same time, we are having an unexpected recession in business.

You may find, therefore, that the general public will jump to conclusions that have been totally unlooked for.

For example, countless people have been postponing purchases of goods because (1) their needs have been fairly well filled, and (2) because they have got into the notion that maybe prices are going to come down after all.

You may find that Truman's withdrawal will somehow tend to accentuate this growing opinion. Some folks may say to themselves, "I guess the President wanted to get out before a depression occurred. Remember what happened to Mr. Hoover?" Others may think that any other candidate for office is less of an inflationist than Mr. Truman. Many Democrats do not share the President's easy-money philosophies, or his belief in pouring billions of dollars into foreign coffers. The Republicans, of course—even those tinted with Fair-Deal leanings—are less profligate than the President and his economic advisers. Yes, the sudden change in Washington may well change sentiment considerably.

This is not to say that there will not be efforts made to stimulate business, if the recession gathers momentum. This must be expected, obviously, but there will not be the Boss-man pushing with the same force as before. This is the significant angle, as I see it.

THE RUMINATOR
By HUMPHREY B. NEILL
A Column of Contrary Opinion

This is not a poltical column so we shall not attempt any interpretation of Mr. Truman's withdrawal from the Presidential race from a political angle. Certainly you have read enough about that already—and will read more as time passes.

From an economic viewpoint, however—with which these pieces are usually concerned—the President's announced decision may have many repercussions not now foreseen. Also, as it happens, it was immediately followed by the resignation of Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson.

The withdrawal of Truman and a wide-open fight on the wage-and-price controversy certainly will add consternation to confusion.

In a practical sense the government will be without a "head" for nearly ten months. Mr. Truman will be president, of course, but as he will not succeed himself (unless he changes his mind and "accepts a draft" at Chicago in July)—as he will not succeed himself he at once loses a tremendous amount of political control. This will be manifest at once, I think. You will see the difference very soon, I feel confident, in the various hearings in Washington.

In the immediate problems of the Steel industry, the resignation of Wilson and withdrawal of Truman—coupled with a perfectly clear indication that there is both a civilian-goods' slump and much greater supplies of steel than had been predicted—in this chaotic situation almost any outcome is possible.

Wilson's resignation strengthens the spines of the steel managers, undoubtedly, because steel management will feel that Wilson had looked into all corners of the problem and was adamantly against the extreme wage-increases recommended by the Wage Stabilization Board. So it is a foregone conclusion that the steel companies will put up a stiff fight, even up to point of accepting a strike. At the same time, Mr. Truman obviously will not "control" the situation as fairly as before his announcement.

It seems to the Ruminator, without benefit of several days of more "ruminating," that we shall find the Congress more and more taking over control of some of these major economic problems. This may sound like good news, but on the other hand it must be remembered that the Congress moves slowly. It is a large body, loaded with diverse opinions and weighted down with political considerations. So, it is a fair prediction that many important legislative acts may be slow in coming into law. The whole stabilization and control machinery is up for inspection and overhaul. Truman's withdrawal and Wilson's resignation was the immediate cause of a postponement of hearings on Monday of this week.

As the unions and the steel industry argue their cases they will be influenced, no doubt, by influences they had not contemplated last weekend.

Public psychology is a mercurial factor, as we have often discussed. The public, we know, has been taking unusual interest in political matters. It is not often in a presidential election year that the people get so excited about "candidates" as they have these past three months.

At the same time, we are having an unexpected recession in business.

You may find, therefore, that the general public will jump to conclusions that have been totally unlooked for.

For example, countless people have been postponing purchases of goods because (1) their needs have been fairly well filled, and (2) because they have got into the notion that maybe prices are going to come down after all.

You may find that Truman's withdrawal will somehow tend to accentuate this growing opinion. Some folks may say to themselves, "I guess the President wanted to get out before a depression occurred. Remember what happened to Mr. Hoover?" Others may think that any other candidate for office is less of an inflationist than Mr. Truman. Many Democrats do not share the President's easy-money philosophies, or his belief in pouring billions of dollars into foreign coffers. The Republicans, of course—even those tinted with Fair-Deal leanings—are less profligate than the President and his economic advisers. Yes, the sudden change in Washington may well change sentiment considerably.

This is not to say that there will not be efforts made to stimulate business, if the recession gathers momentum. This must be expected, obviously, but there will not be the Boss-man pushing with the same force as before. This is the significant angle, as I see it.

New York (AP)—The electronic brain at Manchester University in England has been taught to sing "God Save the Queen," the British Information Service reports. "The mechanical creature is given a coded version of the score, which interprets, then constructs the necessary waveform to give effect to its interpretation. Commissioned for Church Book

DAVID FAIRBANKS

To Illuminate Dedication Book; Queen Will Sign

Woodstock, April 2 — David Fairbanks, one of the few artists to become an expert and an authority in the field of manuscript illumination, has been commissioned to illuminate the page in the Book of Remembrance of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church of Kingston, which will be signed by Her Majesty, Queen Juliana of the Netherlands next Saturday, during her visit to the city.

The dedication, which will be inscribed in 14th Century Gothic uncials by Fairbanks, with the date of "The Fifth Day of April, the Year of Our Lord, 1952," will read as follows:

"This page is dedicated to commemorate the visit of Her Majesty, the Queen of the Netherlands, on the occasion of the 300th Anniversary of the founding of the City of Kingston, and in the 293rd year of the establishment of this Church."

Fairbanks is well qualified to execute the commission having studied the intricate art of manuscript illumination during his residence in Rome in the 1930's. His father was then the assistant to the director of the American Academy, the school for the Prix de Rome students, and was later promoted to professor in charge of the school of Fine Arts at the Academy, a position which he held for 20 years. A guest of his family, Adele Kibre, who was doing manuscript research in the Vatican, enlightened him on the ancient art of illuminating manuscripts.

Visitors Impressed

Visitors to David Fairbanks' Scriptory, located on the village green, are immediately impressed with the unbelievably delicate quality of his work, which nevertheless contains the strength and aura of antiquity. A prayer, for instance, in ancient script will be surrounded by a beautiful border traced in gold and black, heightened by jewel-like colors, and may even contain a perfect miniature painting.

In search of the finest examples of the art, Fairbanks went to the British Museum in London and later to Shanghai to study Chinese illumination.

Upon the death of his father in 1939, Fairbanks returned to the United States, and during the war years was engaged in technical drafting in a defense plant. At the close of World War 2, he came to Woodstock upon the suggestion of his sister, Mrs. Harvey Fite of High Woods, and for three years was employed by George Berk, one of the leading technical illustrators in the country, at his studio on Glasco Turnpike.

Since the opening of the Scriptory in 1950, Fairbanks has not only done manuscript illumination, but extending his interest to the art of heraldry, has designed coats of arms for bookplates, letterheads and other purposes. His maps have already become famous in this area, as well as his handsome monograms, bookplates, letterheads and scrolls.

Recently, he completed work on his new shop display windows. Masked in rich Gothic red fabric, each window contains a small shadow box lined with a black material enhanced with an all-over fleur-de-lis pattern. They will serve as backgrounds for the framed manuscripts on view.

When Fairbanks completes the remodeling of the interior of the Scriptory, visitors will be able to step through the door of the tiny shop and with the artist go back a few centuries while watching him at work on an ancient and revered art, a page of which will once more bear the seal of royalty when her majesty, Queen Juliana of The Netherlands places her signature on it next Saturday.

Commissioned for Church Book

DAVID FAIRBANKS

To Illuminate Dedication Book; Queen Will Sign

Woodstock, April 2 — David Fairbanks, one of the few artists to become an expert and an authority in the field of manuscript illumination, has been commissioned to illuminate the page in the Book of Remembrance of the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church of Kingston, which will be signed by Her Majesty, Queen Juliana of the Netherlands next Saturday, during her visit to the city.

The dedication, which will be inscribed in 14th Century Gothic uncials by Fairbanks, with the date of "The Fifth Day of April, the Year of Our Lord, 1952," will read as follows:

"This page is dedicated to commemorate the visit of Her Majesty, the Queen of the Netherlands, on the occasion of the 300th Anniversary of the founding of the City of Kingston, and in the 293rd year of the establishment of this Church."

Fairbanks is well qualified to execute the commission having studied the intricate art of manuscript illumination during his residence in Rome in the 1930's. Preference Given War 2 Vets at State Rest Camp

Although the State of New York Veterans' Rest Camp at Mount McGregor is open to veterans of World War 1 and 2, of both sexes, preference is being given to those who served between December 7, 1941 and September 2, 1945, State Veteran Counselor Donald G. Moore and Director Howard C. Shurter of the Veterans' Service Agency announced today.

Each applicant must have been enlisted or drafted from New York state or have been a resident of this state for a year preceding application for admission.

Among the questions asked of the applicants are: length of residence in state, previous hospitalization, and names of personal physicians during past five years. Veterans also must agree to abide by camp regulations.

Other rules specify that only veterans requiring convalescent care shall be admitted. No veteran will be accepted who requires hospitalization, surgical dressing or who suffers from a contagious, communicable, mental or venereal disease.

Transportation will be provided to and from the applicant's home, and no charge is made for maintenance. Everything is free.

Application for admission to Mt. McGregor may be made by contacting the Ulster County Veterans' Service Agency located at 32 Main street, Kingston.

By Golly, It Was!

South San Francisco, April 2 (AP)—The caller caid John O. Percy's home was on fire but Percy knew it was April 1. A second call got the same treatment. Just another April's Fool's Day prankster. But after the third call, Percy, now a little doubtful, hurried to his Burlingame home. It was on fire. Damage was estimated at $5,000.

State Woman's Need Cited by Department

New York, April 2 (AP)—A working woman in New York state, living as a member of a family unit, needed an income of $45 a week or $2,340 a year to maintain herself adequately during 1951, the State Labor Department said today.

The department's 15th annual cost-of-living survey said the 1951 figure was an increase of $3.54 a week or 8.5 per cent over the 1950 estimate.

No calculations were announced for a working woman not living in a family unit.

The report said every item in the working woman's standard budget was higher in 1951, with the increases ranging from 2.2 per cent for leisure time activities to 30.3 per cent for income taxes. Department surveyors priced 180 budget items.

The department said the income figure was the minimum to enable the woman to support herself and keep good health.

Once in a While

Hays, Kas., April 2 (AP)—It all just goes to show you—once in a while a woman can be early for an appointment. Miss Ismet Sanlin, a speaker from Turkey on a national tour, arrived here yesterday to address the Knife and Fork Club. She phoned Bill Roberts, secretary of the club. Roberts hustled to the depot but was mildly astonished when he saw Miss Sanlin. It seems the club's next speaker—a man—was scheduled for May 8. Miss Sanlin, who will talk on "Turkey With All the Dressing," is scheduled for April, 1953.

Two More Victims Claimed

Vienna, April 2 (AP)—Prague newspapers today indicated that the months-old purge of top-level Communists with the Czechoslovak government has claimed two more victims. The newspapers indicated that Stanislav Baudys and Antonin Bina have been removed as deputy security ministers. Their boss, Ladislav Kopriva, was removed last January, allegedly "on his own wish."

Ruth Won't Wed Tommy, She Says

New York, April 2 (AP)—Night club singer Ruth Webb said yesterday she would never marry playboy Tommy Manville, regardless of what he says.

The asbestos heir said last week he intended to marry Miss Webb if he gets a divorce from his eighth wife, Georgina Campbell.

"I very definitely would not—under any circumstances—marry Mr. Manville, nor will I ever speak to him again," said Miss Webb.

She added, "it would take a great deal more than money to make me join the chorus."

Publicity regarding Manville's intentions regarding her have "upset me dreadfully, cost me quite a bit of work, and gotten me into serious trouble with my family," Miss Webb said.

When told of Miss Webb's remarks, Manville said:

"If her publicity has annoyed her, it has done more than annoy Tommy Manville. It has raised the price of a divorce from Georgina Campbell from $100,000 to $500,000—she's asking that now."

Tommy and Georgina are legally separated.
